My dear Sir,

I send you the books as you desired, having inspected them you will have the goodness to return them to me as I have not yet ^{had} time enough to check the numbers &c.

It is a pleasure and duty with us to remind our friends and advocates of our Polish cause that they are always present to our thoughts, and that we would be delighted to heap upon them all the good things which the world may possess - on every suitable occasion which may present itself for doing so with propriety. The New Year is one of these. Receive therefore the assurance, on our part, that nothing will delight us so much as to see you in the course of all your life in the enjoyment of all the comforts of the world and to have in you always a steady advocate of our Cause.

Believe me, Dear Sir,

Ever sincerely Yours
