The old man on his deathbed opened his eyes and asked, “Where is my wife?”
“I’m here, Michael.”
“And where is my darling daughter, Rose?”
“I’m here, papa.”
“And where is my son, Daniel?”
“Right here, papa.”
The old man looked puzzled and asked, “So who’s minding the store?”

About the author 1967

Copies of the first edition of my first book, The Naturalized Jews of the Grand Duchy of Posen in 1834 and 1835, are now out of print, but the Revised Edition is available from Avotaynu, Inc. This book, The Jews of Posen Province ..., is available free of charge on the Digibaeck website.

While my Introduction to The Naturalized Jews of the Grand Duchy of Posen in 1834 and 1835 does not specifically state that I rearranged Hirschberg's work by alphabetizing the names, the half-title, "An Alphabetical List of Jews Naturalized in the Grand Duchy of Posen in 1834 and 1835 as Published in Verzeichniß sämmtlicher naturalisirten Israeliten im Grossherzogthum Posen by Isidor Hirschberg in Bromberg in 1836" makes this clear.

The Grand Duchy of Warsaw was never a province of Prussia. The Grand Duchy of Posen was a possession of the King of Prussia in his capacity, prior to 1850, as Grand Duke of Posen. The Congress of Vienna in 1815 specifically stated that the Grand Duchy of Posen was part of Prussia. The Prussians did not want free migration from the poorest domain of the King to the 16 "old" provinces. Accordingly, they first sought to colonize Posen, to develop it economically, and to "Germanize" it. The naturalization of the Jews was a reaction to the Polish uprising of 1830-1831 and was part of the conservatives' plan to neutralize the Poles. As a result of an armed uprising of the Poles in 1848, the Prussians resorted to even greater measures. Posen was incorporated into Prussia in 1850, thereby losing for Posen its separate legal system, its right to have business done in either German or Polish, its right to have legal publications and court procedures in both languages, etc. Indeed, under Prince Anthony Radziwiłł, Polish law was administered, while Eduard von Flottwell's administration gradually enforced a more Germanic régime. Even after 1833 Posen Jews who were citizens of Posen (but not of Prussia) had to apply to the Prussian Minister of the Interior for permission to cross into Prussia since Posen was a separate country. That is why the 1836 book took such pains to indicate by asterisk who was already naturalized in one of the 16 "old" provinces of Prussia, most likely Lower Silesia. Such persons could enter Prussia as citizens of that country with such rights as Jews had in Prussia rather than only by first obtaining a passport from the interior minister of the king-grand duke. See German Archival Sources, Chapter 3.

Nor is it a contradiction that the Prussian ministers controlled the Grand Duchy. Unlike our present view of service to the state, these men served the ruler, not an abstract concept of a territorial state. See Hagen, William W., Germans, Poles, and Jews: The Nationality Conflict in the Prussian East, 1772-1914, cited in the Selected Bibliography, Jewish Relations with Poles and Germans.

The Jews may not have been greatly disadvantaged as compared with their Christian neighbors. Some Jewish communities may have had privileges that were superior to those enjoyed by Christians. Many Jews in Europe fought against Napoleon because they feared the loss of such privileges.

As noted in City Directories, Chapter 7, the Adreß-Kalendar für die Provinzial-Haupt-Stadt Posen auf das Jahr 1835 is available at the Berlin Staatsbibliothek zu Berlin, Haus I and is available online at www.polishroots.org/posen_1835.asp. See also Posen in the list of city directories. Kronthal noted that city directory in 1930 and in 1931 [See Selected Bibliography, Posen Province and Vicinity, Kronthal, Arthur, "Die Naturalisation und die Berufe der Juden in der Provinz Posen vor 100 Jahren," and Selected Bibliography, POSEN (City)], Kronthal, Arthur, "Aus einem jüdischen Leben des vorigen Jahrhunderts." With respect to the number of Jews in Posen, we start with Guldon, Zenon, and Stępkowski, Lew, "Spis ludności żydowskiej z 1790 roku [Census of the Jewish Population in 1790]," Biuletyn Żydowskiego Instytutu Historycznego w Polsce, Warsaw, No. 139/140, Nos. 3/4 of 1986, pp. 123-130, with English, p. 188, and Yiddish, p. 6, summaries at the end of the volume. DS135.P6Z9. [See the same article cited in the Select Bibliography, Pre-Partition Jewish History in Posen.] A table on page 128 of the issue indicates that the Poznań Voivodeship Jewish population for the following dates was:

Unfortunately, the 1790 census data was destroyed in World War II. Apparently, only the males were counted, perhaps not very accurately, at that time. To compare the 1871 Census figures, see Andrée, Richard, in the bibliography in First Names Used by Persons Naturalized in Posen in 1834 and 1835 and Books about Names.

Wobbe, Theresa, ed., Nach Osten: Verdeckte Spuren nationalsozialistischer Verbrechen, Frankfurt am Main: Neue Kritik, ©1992, 238 pp., including bibliographical references, pp. 228-237. HQ1623.N28 1992. The editor, as author, claims at p. 57 that before the Partitions of 1772, 1793, and 1795, 150,000 Jews lived in the areas annexed by Prussia, 250,000 in the areas annexed by Austria, and over 500,000 in the areas annexed by Russia. Since Russia annexed more than Posen and even held Warsaw until the Congress of Vienna in 1815, the figures could be correct.

Trzeciakowski, Lech, in "Social and Political Changes among the Jews of Poznań in the Early 19th Century," [see Selected Bibliography, Jewish Life in Posen between the First Partition and World War I], citing Laubert, infra, states at p. 289 that in 1816 51,951 Jews lived in Posen Province, most very poor, and constituting 40% of Prussia's Jewish population.

Streiter, Karl Heink, [see Selected Bibliography, Jewish Relations with Poles and Germans] put the percentage of Jews, compared to the total population of Posen in 1834, at approximately 6.5%. In my Introduction to The Naturalized Jews of the Grand Duchy of Posen in 1834 and 1834, I indicated on page xiii that the book listed only about 5.5% of the Jewish population of Posen. Of course, these persons were only the heads of households. Upon review of the 1834 and 1837 Posen census data as presented in Bernhard Breslauer's Die Abwanderung der Juden aus der Provinz Posen [see Selected bibliography, Posen Province and Vicinity], I now conclude that there were approximately 68,285 Jews in Posen about 1836 when Hirschberg's book appeared. That means that 5,134 persons, the number listed in my book, represent approximately 7.5% of the total population. However, spot checks of Heppner and Herzberg, Aus Vergangenheit und Gegenwart [see Selected Bibliography, Posen Province and Vicinity], indicate that total actual Jewish residents at this time may have been higher. On the other hand, Bernard Weinryb, in "East European Jewry (Since the Partition of Poland, 1772-1795)" [see Selected Bibliography, General Histories Containing References to Posen Jews] points out that only 535 Jews resident in the city of Posen out of a Jewish population of about 6,000 were naturalized by 1835, and only 20% of total Jewish residents were naturalized by 1843. Compare the situation in 1816:

Laubert, Manfred, Die Verwaltung der Provinz Posen 1815-1847, Breslau: Priebatsch, 1923, 312 pp. + 40 pp. DD491.P88L3; and in full text at <http://www.wbc.poznan.pl/dlibra/docmetadata?id=87806>. The chapter of the Jews appears on pp. 254-263. On page 255, the following table appears in German:

	Jews a) with Citizenship	b) without	Who are employed in
	a)	b)	Agricul-ture	Handwork	Business and Innkeeping	Art and Learned Profes-sions

The same table appears in Laubert, Manfred, "Die Juden der Provinz Posen im Brantweinschank und Hausiergewerbe bis zum Gesetz von 23.7.1847," Deutsche Monatshefte: Zeitschrift für Geschichte und Gegenwart des Ostdeutschtums, Vol. 7 (17), 1940/41, pp. 499-533, at p. 504. DK412.A1D39.

Year	Jewish Residents	School Age Children	In Christian Schools	In Jewish Schools	Jewish Teachers	Jewish Teachers Tested	Vacant Teaching Positions on 31 December
1835	49,550	9,396	1,397	6,271	124	111	—
1836	51,104	9,039	1,804	5,766	119	104	5
1837	49,709	9,032	1,545	5,893	110	99	10

Given the fluctuation in the figures for residents, Laubert's numbers must remain suspect and be used only as a general indication of population.

His article, written during the Nazi period, entitled "Die Posener Regierung über die Ausführung des Judenreglaments vom 1.6.1833," Lattermann, Alfred, ed., Deutsche Wissenschaftliche Zeitschrift im Wartheland, Posen, Vol. 2, 1940, pp. 280-282, DK4040.D48, indicates an 1826 Jewish population of Posen Regierungs-Bezirk of 45,806, for 1831 a count of 49,150, for 1834 a population of 48,840, but for 1835 a Jewish population of 50,479 and for Bromberg in 1834 a Jewish population of 21,764. Again, his work is difficult to accept except as a general indication of the population.

Jacob Toury in his essay, "Der Eintritt der Juden ins deutsche Bürgertum," states at page 170 that the number of Jewish family heads in 1816 for the Posen administrative department was 7,311 while the Bromberg administrative department held 2,992 for a total of 10,303 for the entire Posen Grand Duchy. See also Toury's separate essay, in Selected Bibliography, Emancipation and Emigration, under Liebeschutz, Hans, et al., and separately listed under Toury within the same heading.

The Jewish population of the city of Posen in 1840 was 6,763 persons. In 1848 there were about 800 eligible Jewish voters. See Baron, Salo W., "Aspects of the Jewish Communal Crisis in 1848," Baron, Salo W., and Pinson, Koppel S., eds., Jewish Social Studies: A Quarterly Journal Devoted to Contemporary and Historical Aspects of Jewish Life, Vol. 14, No. 2, April 1952, New York:

Conference on Jewish Relations, pp. 99-144, at p. 104. DS101.J555. See Chapter 10 for further population citations under "Posen Province."

By 1842 a significant outmigration of Jews from Posen had already occurred, mostly to the United States and to other parts of Germany, especially Prussia. Breslauer's book, Die Abwanderung der Juden aus der Provinz Posen, noted supra, lists Neutomischel as a Kreisstadt; Buk was the Kreisstadt for that area in the period covered by this book, but the county seat was later moved. While many Jews lived in Neutomischel later, only about 20 lived there at the time covered by this study.

Further anecdotal evidence of these estimates occurs in Michael M. Zarchin, Jews in the Province of Posen, [see Selected Bibliography, Posen Province and Vicinity, and Landsmannshaftn and Other United States Manuscript Sources]. Using Breslauer's 1831 or 1834 census figures, comparing them to the population figures for Zarchin's selected towns, and then constructing ratios, we find:

1831/1834 Census town	Population	Naturalizations	Percentage
Borek	551	20	3.6
Kurnik	1213	91	7.5
Obornik	366	13	3.6
Rogasen	1384	55	4.0
Samter	733	111	15.1
Sandberg	268	26	9.7
Schwersenz	1569	98	6.2

From the foregoing census total of 6,084 persons from the selected towns compared with the 414 persons naturalized from these same towns, I calculate that the naturalization ratio is 6.8% overall. However, not only is there a vast disparity in the percentage of persons in a given town being naturalized compared to other towns but also assuming that each naturalized person had a wife and five living children, about 47.8% of the Jewish inhabitants were either naturalized or the dependents of such naturalized persons. Further analyzing Zarchin's work in conjunction with my own, the percentage of Jewish tailors, for example, naturalized in a given town depended more upon the local wealth [possibly based upon the enforcement of the guild system] of that town than upon the nature of the profession. My analysis found no correlation between the percentage of tailors in a town and the percentage of those tailors naturalized or their percentage compared with the total Jewish population. Apparently tailors had different success rates in earning a living based more upon location than upon the nature of the profession. My conclusion is that the wealth of the tailors in a given town was directly proportional to the wealth of the guild system of tailors itself. Hence, the tailors engaged in strenuous efforts to control the persons who could enter the profession and to restrict nonmembers from conducting business in the area controlled by the town's Jewish tailor guild.

In most cases, however, the fortunes of the tailors appear to have declined as the conditions of the Jews in Posen declined despite the efforts of the guild system. Hence, when the 1833 decree abolished all but a few of the old taxes, the creditors of the Jewish community sought to collect on past due loans and taxes, further impoverishing those Jewish communities. As Zarchin observed, the Jewish communities in Posen had generally lived beyond their means for many years. See also Bartyś, Julian, "Grand Duchy of Poznań under Prussian Rule: Changes in the Economic Position of the Jewish Population 1815-1848," [See Selected Bibliography, Jewish Relations with Poles and Germans, for the full citation.

The final piece of anecdotal evidence occurs in Clark, W[illiam] G[eorge], "Poland," Galton, Sir Francis, ed., Vacation Tourists and Notes on Travel in 1862-63, Cambridge and London: Macmillan and Co., Vol. 3, pp. 221-310. G170.G17 1862, now Microfilm 21313 G. At p. 226, the author estimates the Jewish population of Posen City at one-sixth of the total population.

I estimate that the head of families listed in the book probably represent about 40% of all Jewish families. When one considers that others in the same family, who were not naturalized but who lived in the same town or area might be guessed at from a listed person in a particular place, then the chance of locating a person in Posen at that time by using the Mormon records or having the research done in Poland rises considerably. Naturally, the less common the surname, the greater the likelihood of the person with that surname being that of a relative to be found at a given location. Of course, there is no guarantee that all members of the same family will have the same surname, especially in the generation that was able to choose the surname.

With respect to the eight naturalization rolls listed in the Introduction to my prior work, these rolls are the originals from which Hirschberg compiled his lists published in 1836. They indicate the location in which the residence permit was issued. The page of the Santomischl register reproduced in my prior work comes from such a roll and indicates the full extent of the information contained therein. In addition to the list of Ostrowo unnaturalized Jews held at YIVO [see Landsmannshaftn and Other United States Manuscript Sources], I have discovered two additional lists of naturalizations, that for Dobrzyce (Dobrzyca in the roll), Mormon film number 1273157, filmed at the [Deutsche] Zentralstelle für Genealogie in Leipzig, in the then German Democratic Republic, and that for Schwerin [also unnaturalized Jews, see Additional Mormon Records and Additional Amtsblatt der Königliche Regierung zu Posen Citations], film number 1190959, filmed at the Bundesarchiv Koblenz. The Wreschen naturalizations are for a slightly later period. See that chapter. Researchers might try the Bundesarchiv and the Geheimes Staatsarchiv Preußischer Kulturbesitz, Berlin-Dahlem, both of which are useful for other research as well. See also German Archival and Other Unpublished Sources. Of course, the Polish district state archives are valuable sources of material, and most main district state archival office holds extensive map collections, some maps being in manuscript and thus available nowhere else. See List of Maps and Map Series. For the list of Polish archives, see Chapter 4.

One digression that I find interesting is that when Isidor Hirschberg saw slow sales, he placed an advertisement in the Posen government publication to try to increase sales, using language very similar to that in his original book introduction. Despite his efforts the sales were not good, and the book was not a commercial success. No supplements ever appeared. The advertisement read:

From the Öffentlicher Anzeiger. Beitrage zu Nro. 37 des Amtsblatts der königl. Regierung zu Posen, Nro. 37 13 September 1836, p. 653.

Introduction

Im Verlag des unterzeichneten Buchhandlung ist mit hoher Bewilligung des Herrn Oberpräsidenten Flottwell so eben erschienen:

Vollständiges, von beiden königl. Regierungen der Provinz Posen beglaubigtes Verzeichniß sämmtlicher naturalisirten. 18 Bogen. 4. broch. 20 sgr.

Die Verlagshandlung hoffe einem serh fühlbaren Bedürfnisse für die Geschäfts- und gewerbtreibende Welt, so wohl des In- als des Auslandes, durch vorstehend angekündigtes Werk abgeholfen zu haben, indem desselbe unbedingt für jede Geschäftsanknüpfung mit einem der in der Handelswelt nicht unbedeutend mit konkurrirenden israelitischen Bewohner der Provinz Posen, laut Allerhöchstem Gesetze von 25. Juni 1833 §25. c. u. f. unentbehrlich ist.—Selbst für Herren Justizkommissarien und Notarien kann dieses Verzeichniß bei Aufnahme einer Klage oder eines Notariats-Dokuments, israelitische Bewohner dieser Provinz betreffend, nur von großem Nutzen seyn.

Jedes Jahr erscheint, für einen billigen Preis, ein Anhang, welcher die Hinzukommenden naturalisirten Israeliten enthalten soll.

Researchers of Posen Jews should not overlook the resources in the archives of the Jewish Historical Institute [see List of Polish Archives Holding Materials for Territory Formerly in Posen] in Warsaw, Poland. There, I discovered a list of Jews not subject to deportation but also not eligible for naturalization in 1834 for the town of Koronowo. The Koronowo list of Jews was among two train-car loads of Jewish documents abandoned by the Nazis in the face of the Soviet advance into Poland. The Koronowo list is one of 122 lists compiled as a result of the Royal Decree of the First of June 1833 granting naturalization, subject to certain conditions, to Jews living in Posen. As far as I know, this list, the Mormon-filmed list for Schwerin, and the Ostrowo list held by YIVO, both as noted above, are the only such lists to have survived out of the 122 originally compiled, but another type of list, a list of Jews otherwise eligible for naturalization, except that they did not speak German well enough to be naturalized, was completed for Mogilno and its dependent towns. The officials also compiled lists of Jews deported to Austria and to Russia.

Introduction

Documents in the Jewish Historical Institute can be read by certain of its employees even if the documents are in Hebrew or Yiddish. The Warsaw National Directorate of the District State Archives sometimes refers items discovered in its collections for translation by the Jewish Historical Institute. Researchers need no special permission to use the facilities of the Institute. Selected employees at the Institute understand English.

Explaining some of the editorial judgments that I made in The Naturalized Jews of the Grand Duchy of Posen in 1834 and 1835, I have consistently rendered Brätz as Braetz and Grätz as Graetz in the listing of the individuals named except that I changed the rendering in the Register and in the Alphabetical List of Locations.

In the translation of the original decree in my prior book, I believe that I should have rendered Allhöchste Verordnung as "Royal Decree" rather than as "Supreme Decree" in a less literal but more idiomatic and meaningful translation.

While the modern German refers to "Neustadt an der Warthe" or "Neustadt a. d. Warthe," I have used Hirschberg's style of "Neustadt a. Warthe." Other writers of the period used the same style that he did.

In the translations into English in this volume, I have assumed that the reader can recognize a feminine ending and have combined men and women of the same profession into one grouping in the analysis of professions. Some first names that I have classified as masculine might be construed as feminine. I am reluctant to classify these names as female since these names are all second names or patronymics for persons with different given names. In most European societies legitimacy is the strongest presumption known to the law. See German Archival Sources, Chapter 3. Accordingly, I have not supposed that persons listed would confess their own bastardy to Christian officials, especially not with the regularity required if all questionable name genders were rendered as feminine. Thus, whenever the gender was doubtful, I rendered it as masculine. I noted that the two corrections from the University Library of Poznań copy of the 1836 book render clearly male names as widows. See List of errors in The Naturalized Jews of the Grand Duchy of Posen in 1834 and 1835, under the discussion for Inowrocław, near the end. A widow was usually known by her late husband's name in Posen.

In compiling the list of professions, I have reversed my judgment as to whether to list all professions on the previous line rather than just the last profession listed, when the following line simply said "do." in the original. See page xvi of the Introduction to the first volume. I am now in agreement with the person (probably Jacob Jacobson) who compiled the list held at the Leo Baeck Institute in listing all professions that were listed on the line above the "do." except where such a listing would be patently incorrect, as where the same profession appeared on both lines. Clearly, Hirschberg himself was inconsistent in this matter.

The professions listed in both volumes represent a broad cross-section of what work must have been done in Posen not only by the Jews but also by the Christian inhabitants. Since the Jews could not enter the Christian guilds, did the professions listed here parallel the Christian professions inside the guilds? Also, Tischler appears, not Zimmermann. Is the former a euphemism for the latter since the Jews could not enter the carpenters' guild? If so, did the Jews build their own houses? If not, did the Christians build houses inside the ghetto for the Jews despite rules in some towns forbidding intermixture? Such rules did vary from town to town in Posen and may often have been enforced only when someone, usually Christian, felt himself disadvantaged by Jewish competition. Other professions may have been subject to the same vagaries, and the situation most likely varied from one time to another and from town to town. Furthermore, taxes on houses inhibited building. The study of this issue will have to await someone with more ability in this area than I possess.

The Jews, as will be seen from the listings of professions, carried on an active export trade, accounting for perhaps 75% of all foreign trade involving Posen and also were responsible for a large portion of the import trade. The Jews, living as they did in more precarious circumstances, filed bankruptcies at a far higher rate than their Christian neighbors, especially since the Jews were far more likely to be involved in non-farming, cash-intensive professions at this time than the average Christian peasant. The Jews also were heavily represented in hosting local and foreign travelers and drinkers in inns, taverns, bars, and the like, and the Jews usually handled the lottery trade. All of these professions, as well as acting as a middleman between the farmer and the textile manufacturer or further user of staples, were unlikely to endear the Jews of the region to the other local inhabitants, especially the Polish peasants, sometimes encouraged by the local police or the local nobility. No wonder that so many Jews emigrated in the face of such a hostile environment!

Analyses of the professions in Appendix A are based, not upon the number of individuals (5,127), but rather upon the number of declarations of that profession. A number of individuals declared two or even three professions while a few declared even more. Thus, the total number of declared professions exceeds the total number of individuals by a considerable amount.

Among those persons listed in the Selected Bibliography under various publications as having been born in Posen, the province even produced the United States' first Nobel Laureate [in physics], Albert Abraham Michelson. See Selected Bibliography, Strelno, passim.

An interesting facet of the research has been the discovery that the concept of the husband going to work while the wife stays home to keep house and raise the children is largely a recent phenomenon, probably coming into common usage only after about 1850 or even later. With respect to Posen Province during the period and also in the United States during the 1830s and probably elsewhere in Europe, the general understanding appears to have been that the husband and wife were one, both working together in one common profession. Each helped the other, and most men lived and worked at or near home, with the family usually living in the back of the shop or store. Even after the turn of this century, it was not uncommon for the wife to work with her husband in the business even if she was not doing the work in the same location. For example, my own grandmother, in the United States, sewed tablecloths and napkins that her husband then sold to restaurants that he supplied. Perhaps, with the advent of general usage of computers, many husbands formerly commuting to work may come to work at home, possibly in a separate office in the back, instead of the front of the dwelling. Thus, the custom described above may come full circle in about 150 years.

I have made the decision to exclude from the bibliography all juvenile literature unless it added some research data not otherwise available. Generally, juvenile literature has been limited to items about Akiba Eger or Haym Salomon. For example, I included a book of juvenile literature because it reproduced a supposed picture of Salomon. However, the reader should be aware that the picture is almost certainly not of Haym Salomon.

I wish to express my appreciation to the Library of Congress, without whose resources this book could not have been produced. Especially useful were the Geography and Map Division, from which the five maps in my first book and the three maps in this book came; the Hebraic Section, especially the now retired Dr. Peggy Pearlstein and Sharon Horowitz, and the former Head of the Section, Michael Grunberger; and the Local History and Genealogy Division. When one adds the resources of the New York Public Library and of the Leo Baeck Institute, the reference sources are immense. I would like to thank Mr. Hans Hirsch for his valuable advice on the translations of the professions. I express my gratitude to Warren and Rivca Cohn and to Rabbi David Shapiro for their work on the Hebrew translations of the death records. I am also grateful to Frau Angelika Ellmann-Krüger of Berlin for her help in correcting my transcription of German bibliographical entries. This book is designed to fill in information not contained in her CD-Rom on the Jews of Germany. She purposely did not cover Posen Province because she knew that I was doing that area. Finally, I wish to thank the Leo Baeck Institute for creating and maintaining the Edward Luft Collection and for publishing this book and Stop Thief! The True Story of Abraham Greenthal, King of the Pickpockets in 19th Century New York City, as Revealed from Contemporary Sources.

Those wishing to contact me directly may write tome at luft1111@hotmail.com.

Many manuscripts from Posen Province, frequently with the name of the letter writer, if the manuscript is a letter.

Lewis and Daniel Lewin Collection, now on Yeshiva University Library Archives microfilm 26, contains pinkassim in German and Hebrew from the late eighteenth century to the twentieth century, over 500 manuscripts and pinkassim for towns in Posen Province, including many mohel books, death and burial registers, etc., including, inter alia, Kempen, Rawitsch, Schrimm, Militsch, Myslowitz, Pleschen, and circa fifty others. Many of the items held are of a similar type to those held in the Gesamtarchiv der deutschen Juden but are often fragments and items of lesser value to genealogists. However, one item of significant genealogical value is Matsevot kodesh ir Pozna/Posener Grabstein Inschriften, [1864?], 4 leaves, bound. At Yeshiva University Rare Book Room, MS 289A, and on microfilm. Record of the inscriptions on the tombstones of prominent rabbis of Posna (Posen), 1735-1864, probably copied by Louis Lewin. Included are those of Rabbi Akiva Eiger and his son, R. Shlomo Eiger. Lewin no. 265. In fact, it details prominent rabbinical figures from 1736 to 1890. They were often also preachers. Entirely in Hebrew script, 34 entries on the microfilm, exposures 309-316.

[Material on Posen.] At Yeshiva University Rare Book Room, MS 562. Correspondence of Louis Lewin with Arthur Kronthal, born in Lissa, 20th century, 42 unbound leaves + 15 postcards and 2 envelopes. Lewin no. 437. Material on the history of the Jews of Posen, including letters and postcards, almost all of them between Louis Lewin of Breslau, and Arthur Kronthal of Berlin. Some of the letters deal with the history of Kronthal's family.

Not all places in Posen appear in either this book or in The Naturalized Jews of the Grand Duchy of Posen in 1834 and 1835. General civil registration began in 1874 in Posen along with most of the rest of Germany. See P. A. Alsberg, R. Blumenthal, C. Fraenkel, and J. Raba, "Registration of Birth, Deaths and Marriages in European Jewish Communities, in Palestine, and in Israel," Archivum: Revue internationale des archives, Paris: Presses Universitaires de France/Munich: Verlag Dokumentation, 1961, Vol. 9, 1959, pp. 101–119. Library of Congress call number CD1.A18; at Staatsbibliothek zu Berlin, Haus I, 9 Per 782. This article lists the dates of name adoptions for all German states. In addition, entries indicate the beginning and ending dates for which each institution, usually the synagogue, kept vital records. For Prussia, see pp. 111–112. The civil registration records, which are mostly in archives and unpublished, are not generally listed in either my earlier book or this one although the Mormon films, holding the civil registration records, are listed when known. The Genealogical Society of Utah (Mormons) has films for civil registration, in at least one case to 1935 for the Posen area, but most civil registration microfilms cover 1874-1877 or 1874-1884.

The indexing of the Mormon records is about two years behind the receipt of those records from Polish sources. The Poznań archives has filmed some additional vital statistics records, but they do not yet appear in the index to Mormon records. Also, the Szczecin archives has microfiched some additional records but has not given them to the Mormons. The Szczecin archives may have transferred these items to Koszalin. However, see the report on the Jewish Records Indexing-Poland Project by Barbara Krasner-Khait in Avotaynu, listed in the Selected Bibliography under Jewish Life in Posen between the First Partition and World War I.

See Weiner, Miriam, Jewish Roots in Poland: Pages from the Past and Archival Inventories, in the Bibliographies and Reference Works with Respect to Libraries and Archives of the Selected Bibliography section for additional citations.

In the list that follows, Geburten = Births, Heiraten = Marriages, and Tote = Deaths

A diligent search of the latest Mormon listing of towns in what was formerly Posen yields the following additional records which the researcher may consult for relevant Jewish materials:

[1]Microfilm 1,271,465 contains only right side pages. See Luft, Edward David, The Naturalized Jews of the Grand Duchy of Posen in 1834 and 1835, pp. 166 and 174. See also Stix, Judith Baer, "An Adventure with the Saints," AVOTAYNU: The International Review of Jewish Genealogy, Vol. XI, No. 3, Fall 1995, p. 47. DS101.A87. She states that, contrary to the information stated in the catalogue, Film 1,857,840 contains death records to 1844, not 1837; and three census records: the 1834 census, corrected to 1835; an 1842 census containing a numbered list of heads of households, followed by the corresponding list of each person in the household with that person's name and age. One entry, not in Gothic, but in Roman, script lists "Dr.," and, finally, an 1845 census on a printed form in German and Polish, listing all family members by name and age with additional information, e. g. place of residence and place of parents' birth. The last entry has been corrected twice, first listing the entry as number 365, then 287, then 176.

Der jüdische Einfluß auf den Deutschen Hohen Schulen: ein familienkundlicher Nachweis über die jüdischen und verjudeten Universitäts- und Hochschulprofessoren, n. p.: Kreis der Freunde und Förderer der Deutschen Auskunftei, 1928, 7 vols. "Vollständiges Verzeichnis sämtlicher jüdischen, jüdischversippten und jüdisch beeinflußten Professoren ..." The Genealogical Society of Utah holds Vol. 1: Universität Göttingen; Vol. 2: Universität Berlin, Part 1; Vol. 4: Universität Königsberg in Preußen; Vol. 5: Universität Berlin, Part 3; Vols. 6-7: Universität Breslau; Vol. 8: Universität Berlin, Part 4. Directories of Jewish professors and administrators at German colleges and universities. The information includes the date and place of birth, titles, residential address, familial relations, father's occupation, the subject's religious affiliation, and references. Many of the persons listed were born in Posen. item 6 1609197

The Mormons also list a book not on microfilm:

Thomassek, R., Alphabetischer Ortsverzeichnis der Wojwodschaft Posen: nach amtlichen Quellen/ zusammengestellt und bearbeitet von R. Thomassek, Leipzig: Zentralstelle für Genealogie, 1983, 264 pp. [An alphabetical list of locations in the Voivodeship of Posen.] See also Map Series.

The Mormons also include in their catalogue:

Jüdische Tote 1820-1850 (Stadt Posen) c. 1820 to 1853. On one reel filmed at Leipzig: Zentralstelle für Genealogie, 1983. item 1 1334544

Lists of Jews in the Grand Duchy of Posen, Germany; and Jewish deaths for the city of Posen, now Poznań, Poland. Also includes Passover charity collections and disbursements. Text in Hebrew with some Yiddish as well. Berlin, 1937. This item has been partially translated in Death Records, Chapter 14.

The Jewish archival holdings at Archiwum Państwowe w Bydgoszczy, Oddział w Inowrocławiu, as listed in Wakuluk, Lidia, Informator o zasobie, Zasób Archiwum Państwowego w Bydgoszczy, Oddział w Inowrocławiu, Informator, Inowrocław, 1985, 52 pp., are slightly different listings from those in the Mormon catalogue:

Record Group	Community	County	Dates	Number of Documents
217	Gębice	Mogilno	1832-1849	2
218	Gniewkowo	Inowrocław	1815-1847	3
219	Kwieciszewo	Mogilno	1832-1873	2
220	Pakość	Inowrocław	1825-1847	3
221	Trzemeszno	Mogilno	1832-1847	2
222	Wylatowo	Mogilno	1832-1848	2

For towns listed in the index and not available from the relevant district state archives in Poland, check the Catholic parish registers for pre-1874 vital records. Similarly, for smaller towns, Catholic priests sometimes kept Jewish records in the back of the Catholic parish register, especially when no nearby synagogue existed. A few volumes more than 100 years old may still exist in the relevant local vital records office despite such a circumstance violating Polish law.

As is the case in the classification of the Mormon records themselves, the voivodeship designation in this volume follows the geographic circumstances as they existed in 1956 when Poland was divided into 17, and not into the current 49, voivodeships. Thus, the listings in The Naturalized Jews of the Grand Duchy of Posen in 1834 and 1835 and the references in this work refer to the earlier voivodeship divisions of Poland. The former territory of Posen currently consists of all or part of eight voivodeships while the number in 1956 was three, i. e. Bydgoszcz, Poznań, and Zielona Góra. The additional five voivodeships today are Gorzów Wielkopolski, Kalisz, Konin, Leszno, and Piła. See Polish Archives, Chapter 4.

Nro. 21 R Juni, pp. 379-380, "Betrifft die Verhältnisse der Juden in den preußischen Staaten"] confirmed the 6 May 1816 decree [Amtsblatt, May c. No. 61, Nro 2, 11 June 1816, p. 22, "Die Nicht-Ertheilung von Pässen an dieseitige Juden betreffend, die solche nachsuchen, um in den älteren Provinzen der Monarchie sich ein unterkommen als Lehrbursche etc. zu verschaffen"] that the Decree of 11 March 1812 did not apply to reacquired territories, including Posen.

The Jewish Museum of the City of Frankfurt am Main, Germany, has published a list of its birth, marriage, and death registers and similar holdings on the Jews of various locations in the former eastern provinces of Germany, now in Poland and Russia (such as Königsberg). See <http://www.juedischesmuseum.de/einrichtungen/Personenstandsregister_Ostdeutschland.pdf>. The holdings include Czempin, Fraustadt, Meseritz, Nakel, Schönlanke, Schwerin an der Warthe, Unruhstadt, and Wronke. There is also an incorrect reference to Jastrow being in Posen, but it was in Grenzmark Posen-Westpreußen during the interwar years only.

The location of these records is unknown. As stated in Archiwum Państwowe Miasta Poznania i Województwa Poznańskiego, Guide to the State Archives in Poznań and their Branches, pages 754-759 [see Skopowski, Czesław, ed., in the Selected Bibliography, Bibliographies and Reference Works with Respect to Libraries and Archives, 80 chests of records were carried away by the Nazis in 1943 and not returned. Furthermore, the Archives building was set afire on 29 January 1945. The building and all of the records therein were destroyed, especially records of towns from the nineteenth century]. It is possible but improbable that, although town records of the towns were destroyed in the 1945 fire, some records, perhaps duplicates, might remain in eastern Germany or Russia.

The former branch of the Geheimes Staatsarchiv, Preußischer Kulturbesitz at Merseburg has closed, and its contents are available at Dahlem. Items formerly from Merseburg (Westhafen) and German Archival Sources are available from Dahlem on two days' notice or less. The Merseburg archives held extensive records for Posen; the still unpublished indexes now are available to the public. The collection contains a large number of items relative to the Jews of Posen, many items dating from 1795-1815.

To use any German archives, the researcher needs only local, not national, permission. Few, if any, denials occur. Those writing in German will sometimes receive faster replies. As some archives have limited space, requesting permission to use German archives in advance of arrival is wise.

Stefan Hartmann, "Materiały źrodłowe do dziejów Wielkopolski w zasobie Tajnego Pruskiego Archiwum Państwowego w Berlinie-Dahlem," Poznański Rocznik Archiwalno-Historyczny, vol. 6/7, 1999/2000, pp. 125-131. At Leo Baeck Institute, New York City, Edward Luft Collection, AR 6957, location S42/5. A general review of holdings on Wielkopolska at the Geheimes Staatsarchiv-Preußischer Kulturbesitz, Berlin-Dahlem, noting some archival holdings for the Prussian period for Poznań, pp. 129-131 and for the same period in Bydgoszcz, p. 131. No specific mention of Jews.

The German-held portion of the Gesamtarchiv der deutschen Juden is now held in Berlin at the Neue Synagoge Berlin—Centrum Judaicum. See address, infra. Seating is very limited so advance reservations are required. For those interested in Jewish genealogical research, an important reason to use this archive is the existence of the index to the Gesamtarchiv der deutschen Juden. Jacob Jacobson, the greatest Jewish genealogist that Germany has produced, compiled the Gesamtarchiv mostly in the 1920s and early 1930s. It contains items from about 1750 to about 1931.

Although the Archive was never as complete as its name implies, the Gesamtarchiv contains many important documents useful in locating ancestors, such as naturalization lists, some vital statistics records, and various other items not available to the interested public since the collection was seized by the Nazis in about 1940 until after the reunification of Germany.

The archives has microform copied the index cards. Generally, the record group is arranged by town in alphabetical order with each item listed on a separate card. The index lists well over 1,000 documents from various parts of the pre-1945 German Reich, including areas now in Poland. Unfortunately, some documents are unreadable due to previously poor storage (noted on the index card), and the indexers could read no Hebrew so documents in that language (which might also indicate records in Yiddish) are simply listed as a document in Hebrew script with the contents undescribed. Most of the documents that Jacobson collected were from the archives of Jewish communities so the collection contains few official records. Given the large migration of Posen Jews to the bigger cities, especially Berlin and Breslau, the archives, which contains the records of many Germans Jews from about 1750 to about 1930, are of tremendous value.

Peter Landé has compiled the list of the surviving records from the Gesamtarchiv der Deutschen Juden in an article entitled "The Complete Archives of the German Jews," AVOTAYNU, Volume 9, No. 1, Spring 1993, pp. 28-32. DS101.A87. That article indicates the years involved for each entry and the number of items but not the subject matter of each item. One portion of the archives is in the Central Archives for the History of the Jewish People in Jerusalem, another in the Leo Baeck Institute in New York, and the last portion now in the Stiftung Neue Synagoge Berlin—Centrum Judaicum. The Stiftung Neue Synagoge Berlin—Centrum Judaicum will also research Berlin cemetery burials for the Schönhauserallee and Weißensee cemeteries. Many of the thousands of books once in the synagogue library are now scattered throughout Germany, Poland. Israel, and the United States. The Stiftung can sometimes inform those seeking a book formerly in the synagogue library where to inquire about the book's present location.

Although Jacob Jacobson's wife smuggled certain Berlin records to London, and those items are now in the possession of the Leo Baeck Institute, 129 East 73rd Street, New York, NY 10021; ☎212-744-6400; the Archives appear to have remained in Germany. See Landsmanshaftn, Chapter 1, for records held in the United States, including those at the Leo Baeck Institute.

The towns for Posen are Betsche, Birnbaum [in Record Group AS1180 for the year 1816], Bomst, Bromberg [in Record Group AS1163 for years 1833-1843], Dobrzyca (Dobberschütz), Fraustadt, Gnesen, Grätz [in Record Group AS1162 (no years specified)], Jarotschin, Jutroschin, Koschmin, Kosten, Kurnik, Meseritz, Neustadt a. W., Obornik, Ostrowo, Pleschen, Posen, Santomischel, Schlichtingsheim, Schroda [in Record Group AS1245, naturalizations for years 1840-1845], Schwerin a. W., and Unruhstadt. The Mormons hold most of the items in the list. However, previously unpublished parts of the index appeared in Luft, Edward David, "Jewish Records Held in Leipzig Archives," AVOTAYNU, Vol. 7, No. 4, Winter 1991, p. 28. In the above list, all those files listed as being in a specific record group originally were a part of the Gesamtarchiv der deutschen Juden.

See also p. xvi of Luft's Naturalized Jews... for additional items in this archives and on microfilm in Mormon libraries.

Another potential source of information is the Nordostdeutsches Kulturwerk, which inherited the Posener Archiv. The Kulturwerk is located at Conventstraße 1, D-21335 Lüneburg, Germany; ☎011-49-4131-37097. The former archivist, Dr. Sophia Kemlein, wrote her dissertation on the Jews of Posen Province. She is fluent in English and Polish. See her book listing in the Selected Bibliography.

The Kassenärztliche Vereinigung Berlin has made the "Reichsarztregister" available to the public. During the Nazi régime all German physicians had to be listed in "Reichsarztregister" This index includes information about 97,087 physicians from 1933 until the early 1950s. Even Jewish physicians were listed until 30 September 1938. At that time the Nazis revoked their licenses to practice. About 2,000 Jewish doctors and dentists live in Berlin in 1933.

The "Reichsarztregister" database is searchable by surname and the first letter of the given name. Among other information the registration includes the year of birth and the permanent address in most cases. The database is not available online. Private persons may address inquiries to:

Although the Germans do hold many records, Poland appears to hold most of the records for the former Posen Province. Generally, international law provides that archives with respect to a specific territory will fall under the control of the new sovereign when border realignments change the sovereign power administering the territory in question. However, record groups having both current and lost territories represented will remain among the fonds not transferred under this rule. In the future, the Polish and German authorities may well exchange microfilms of each others' holdings.

The Poles plan to place on computer disks the provincial police list of all persons in the Posen Administrative District and the list of the residents of the city of Bromberg. The local authorities maintained these lists from about 1870 through about 1930. The lists show the name, religion, address, military service, date of moving from the prior residence, other persons in the household, and various other items. When finished, the Polish District State Archives Administration will offer copies of the computer disks for sale to the public. The researcher may then simply enter the name of the person researched and have the computer print out a list of all persons with that name for the area. Presumably, one should have the possibility of limiting the search by specifying the religious affiliation.

For a website dealing with the Netzekreis, the northern portion of Provinz Posen, see http://www.netzekreis.de. Each of the 59 communities in the Netzekreis is separately treated at http://www.netzekreis.de/ortschaften/ortschaften.html. However, the most important Netzekreis locations in which Jews lived were Czarnikau, Filehne, Neudorf, Putzig, Schönlanke, and Usch. These towns were primarily in the areas that were earlier parts of Kreis Czarnikau and Kolmar. The website is in German. For those needing a translation, try http://babelfish.altavista.com.

Two archives that may hold items of interest for the Netzekreis are:

19. Peltasohn, Martin (1849-1912), from Ostrowo, MdA
20. Placzek, Michael (born 1860), from Kreis Posen, chairman of the city council
21. Sabor, Adolf Abraham (1841-1907) from Wollstein, MdR
22. Straßmann, Wolf (1821-1885, from Lissa, MdA, chairman of the city council
23. Waldstein, Felix David (1865-1943), from Gnesen, MdR, MdA, and MdN
24. Witting, Richard (1856-1923), from a Posen family, Lord Mayor [of Posen, brother of 12, supra]
25. Wolff, Eduard (1852-1914), from Lissa, MdA, chairman of the city council

The list does not mention Arthur Kronthal who was a city councillor in Posen before 1918.

The list was published in Neubach, Helmut, "Posener Juden als Stadtverordnetenvorsteher" [Posen Jews as City Council Presidents], Jahrbuch Weichsel-Warthe, Wiesbaden: Landsmannschaft Weichsel-Warthe Bundesverband e. V., Vol. 55, 2009, pp. 105-110, with bibliography, p. 110. At Leo Baeck Institute, New York City, Edward Luft Collection, AR 6957, location S42/5; at Biblioteka Instytutu Historii, ul. Św. Marcin 78, Poznań, no call number; at Staatsbibliothek zu Berlin, Haus II; and at Geheimes Staatsarchiv-PK, 21 W 44. The article deals with Posen Jewish city-level politicians between 1849 and 1918. Mention of Richard Witting, mayor of the city of Posen, 1891-1902, who greatly developed the city. There were about 500 city-level Jewish politicians in Posen Province during the period 1893-1914. Except in Breslau, no other large city had so many Jews as city council presidents. There were also many in Bromberg and Hohensalza [Inowrazlaw], p. 105.

Commercial counselor Bernhard Jaffé became Posen City Council President in 1885. His son Moritz, later, under Mayor Richard Witting, served on the city council and in 1909 wrote, with the help of the city archivist, Adolf Warschauer, Die Stadt Posen under preußischer Herrschaft, q. v., under POSEN (City)/POZNAŃ. Bernhard Jaffé died on 30 August 1885.

Breslau-born attorney Julius Orgler was born in 1829 and followed Jaffé. He entered the Posen City Council in 1873 and celebrated 25 years there in 1898. He was one of the first Jewish jurists to become a member of the Prussian state service, beginning in the county seat of Militsch in Lower Silesia and two years later being transferred to Posen. In 1879 he was part of the board of the lawyer's society in 1894 became the chairman. After 28 years in the city council, in 1901 he resigned at city council president and was made an honorary citizen of Posen. As privy senior attorney Julius Orgler died on 26 April 1902 in Posen.

His successor was Joseph Landsberger, M. D., the only Jewish Chairman of the Posen City Council who was not an attorney. He was Chairman from 1901-1902, the shortest tenure of anyone. He was a highly respected physician interested in history. IN September 1902 he moved to Berlin, where more than 100 Jewish city councilors lived, the majority probably coming from Posen Province.

His successor, Dr. jur. S. Lewinski, served from 1902-1904. In Autumn 1898 Lewinski has been a candidate in the City of Posen on the Progressive Party ticket for the Prussian Chamber of Deputies. In Autumn 1902 Posen Lord Mayor Richard Witting resigned municipal office to accept a lucrative banking position in Berlin, praising Lewinski in his farewell speech, p. 106.
The fourth jurist was Julius Salz, who was Posen City Council President from 1904-1909. He died in office at age 57 on 20 February 1909.

Michaelis Placzek, born in Schwersenz in 1860, became Posen City Council President from 1909-1918, having been a member of the Council since 1891. After World War I, Placzek also moved to Berlin, becoming a founder of the Freie wissenschaftliche Vereinigung [Independent Scientific Society] at the university.

In 1852 Lissa-born Eduard Wolff, attorney, notary, and legal councilor, won a seat in the Prussian Chamber of Deputies in May 1900. He served for his home district of Fraustadt-Lissa. Initially he belonged to the Progressive Party and later to the Progressive People's Party. He held his seat until his death in May 1914. He was also a member of the district council and served on the board of the Posen Bar Association, p. 107.

Also a member of the Prussian Chamber of Deputies was the lawyer and factory owner, Dr. Leopold Levy, who served from 1911-1918 for his home district of Hohensalza-Strelno. He was born in 1870 in Inowrazlaw. He was a National Liberal, slightly more conservative than most Jews. He held membership in the Inowroclaw City Council, the Hohensalza district council, and two superregional bodies, the Posen County Council and the Prussian Chamber of Deputies. He also belonged to the Bromberg Chamber of Commerce and owned a lime pit. He was one of the most influential personalities in the Bromberg district, pp. 107-108.

Three additional Jewish city council presidents from Posen Province are known. The first is J. Joachim who held the position in Pleschen for 26 years and died in June 1904. His counterpart in Wollstein in Bomst County, Samuel Krause was brick factory owner. The final one was Itzig Hamburger in Schmiegel but his vital information is unknown, p. 108. [Cf. Kaplan, Marion A., ed., Jewish Daily Life in Germany, 1618-1945, listed under "Jewish Life in Posen between the First Partition and World War I." Discussion of Itzig Hamburger of Schmiegel, p. 120, probably based upon files at the Leo Baeck Institute, New York City.]

Three additional Posen Jews moved culture forward in the west. The first was attorney Isidor Friedmann, born Kempen 1841 and Chairman of the Glogau City Council for many years. He died there in 1920. He was primarily known for his speeches against the death penalty in lawyers' meetings.

Physician Wolfgang Strassmann was born in Rawitsch, Kreis Kröben, 1821 but moved early in life to Berlin and participated in the March Revolution of 1848. He entered the Berlin City Council 15 years later, becoming chairman from 1875-1885. He then entered the Prussian Chamber of Deputies as a Progressive Liberal for a Berlin constituency, serving for nearly 10 years. In his practice Strassmann encountered the social problems of the rapidly growing capital and founded the Berlin Society against Poverty as well as the German Society for poor relief and charity, which he led for years. The East Berlin working neighborhood of Stralau has a street named for him.

Wilhelm Salomon Freund, a lawyer, had the most service in councils and parliaments of any Jewish council chairman. He was born in Schmiegel, Kreis Kosten, in 1831. He migrated with his parents and attended school in the Silesian capital, Breslau. He was a member of the City Council there for 44 years and was chairman for 31 years and for about a quarter-century chaired the Silesian Bar Association. In 1876 Freund entered the Prussian Chamber of Deputies as a member of the Progressive Party and in 1879 was chosen for the German Reichstag, although only for a few years. In 1879 he again offered himself as a candidate for the provincial parliament. Wilhelm Salomon Freund was made an honorary citizen of Breslau by the Lord Mayor, Georg Bender, p. 109.

Researchers should also check the Wiener Library, London, http://www.wienerlibrary.co.uk/collections/documents/collection/collectionitem.aspx?oItemID=12647 for holdings. For example, it holds in the miscellaneous collections:

Typescript translation of a newspaper article about J. S. Bernhardt's financial involvement in the extension of the town hall, Lissa (Posen); also correspondence with depositor (1818), no date on the copy. Call number 636/4.

List of Polish Archives Holding Materials for Territory Formerly in Posen

All Polish state archives are controlled by the:

Naczelna Dyrekcja Archiwów Państwowych
ul. Rakowiecka 2D
02-517 Warsaw
Poland
☎011-48-22-565 46 00
FAX: 011-48--22565-46-14
E-mail: ndap@archiwa.gov.pl
Website: http://www.archiwa.gov.pl/index.eng.html

The website contains the inventory of most of the national holdings so the researcher can see what exists and where in Poland it is located. For another list of Polish archives and related information, including E-mail addresses, see http://www.rootsweb.com/~polwgw/addresses.html.

The Director's telephone numbers are ☎011-48-22-831-32-06; 22-831-32-07; 22-831-32-08, and 22-831-95-84; FAX: 22-831-75-63, from 8:30 a. m. to 4:00 p. m., Monday through Friday. The Information Center of the Main National Archives, [Centralny Ośrodek Informacji Archiwalnej] (Director's telephone numbers: ☎011-48-22-831-32-06, extension 42. In-person research in any local district state archives controlled by the above "Main Directorate" requires only the permission of the local head of the archives unless for certain materials after 1953, which requires the permission of the Main Director. An English-speaking aide in the Foreign Department is at ☎011-48-22-831-32-06, ext. 33, from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m. weekdays Warsaw time. Denials of access [now rare] can be appealed to the Main Director. Researchers must pay for mail inquiries at a rather high fee for the work performed, including photocopies of documents. Allow at least six weeks for a response from the Main Director ate and at least nine weeks for a response from a District State Archives or branch, as the local archive will send the answer (as to whether anything appears in its records) through the Main Directorate in Warsaw, along with a request for payment for a preliminary search. If the local archives finds something, the Main Directorate levies an additional charge when the information arrives in Warsaw. If the researcher knows the particular location of an item in an archive, he may contact that archive directly to save time.

The Polish State Archives' Integrated Archival Information System, http://szukajwarchiwach.pl, has a continuing program of digitizing and posting online various holdings of genealogical interest. Check periodically for new postings. To view the following images, click the "Digital Copies" tab on the item description and, sometimes, first click the "Units" tab to select an item. Clicking on a thumbnail image causes a larger image to appear. It can be further enlarged by clicking on the square icon near the bottom right of the image. Volunteers are indexing the pages and posting the results at www.basia.famula.pl/. The pages can be read in English by selecting that language for display. A similar project, but specifically for Jewish records, can be found at http://www.jewishgen.org/jri-pl/jriplweb.htm/.

The following list shows the archives servicing the former Posen area and is taken from a general guide to archives published by the Head Directorate of the District State of Archives of Poland:

This edition lists literature on the holdings of each Polish archives controlled by the Polish District State Archives and on some other Polish archives. A single added sheet of corrections. Since the two editions list slightly different information, especially in terms of the non-Polish archives covered, it is useful to consult both editions.

The Mormons have not filmed many things. Polish State Archives branches in Leszno (Lissa), Piła (Schneidemühl), Kalisz and elsewhere hold valuable sources on Posen Jewry, not microfilmed by the Genealogical Society of Utah. For example, the series of Volksbücher for the entire population of Rawitsch in the 1840-60 period, a house-by-house census, registering entire families, including married children and grandchildren, dates and places of birth, notations, etc., are at the Leszno District State Archive. Material on Koschmin and Krotoschin Jewry is at Kalisz District State Archive. A comprehensive census of the Jews of Schönlanke from the 1830s is at Piła Branch of the Poznań District State Archives.

For additional telephone numbers of persons and institutions, see http://tel.portal.pl/asp/szukaj_a.asp. It is only in Polish and requires the use of Polish diacritical marks in searches: ą - a*, c - c*, ę - e*, l - l*, n- n*, ó - o*, ? - s*, z - z*, ? - z.

The main state archives in Poznań and its branch in Piła are posting some of their holdings online in full-text. See http://szukajwarchiwach.pl, the Polish State Archives' Integrated Archival Information System. To restrict searches to archival items that have images available, click "advanced options" below the search box, then check “search only fonds/units with digital copies” under “Search Preferences.” Note that the search is sensitive to Polish or German diacritical marks. Click the keyboard in the search box to access Polish or German letters with diacritical marks by using the “Alt” key on that keyboard, or to access Russian, German, or French letters. To view images, click the “Digital Copies” tab on the item description and, sometimes, first click the “Units” tab to select an item, or click on “Digital copies” to view thumbnails of the images, click a thumbnail to enlarge, and click the square icon on the bottom right of the enlarged thumbnail to enlarge much further. A few of these posting are listed under the geographic names of the locations in the Select Bibliography.

One digital fond in the State Archives in Poznań is the Privilegium der Judenschneider in Kórnik, http://szukajwarchiwach.pl/53/1331/0/-/3?q=Kurnik&wynik=69&rpp=15&page=5#tabJednostka Microfilm code: O-64185; the 1754 statute of the Tailor’s Guild of the Jews of Kurnik, certified in 1793. 6 VII. 10 § § Statute, with the addition of 1760. 27 I. Displaying the seal of the city of Kurnik, 8˚, 2 cards in the covering paper, in good condition; 1754. 17 VI.

The current vital records holdings of the Poznań District State Archives, differing slightly from the records of the holdings in the Mormon catalogue and taken from:

Miedzianowska, Jadwiga, for Archiwum Państwowe w Poznaniu, Spis Zespołów: Informator o zasobie archiwalnym, Poznań, 1995, 373 pp. Initially only 5 copies were printed of the computer-generated list of the holdings of the archives in Poznań. The archives will make photocopies of relevant pages but has no full copies for sale. [Those identical to the files listed in the Mormon holdings are omitted.] At Riksarkivets bibliotek, Stockholm, Sweden, call number Ac-mb /Archiwum.

The Poznań archives has detailed listings of residents and their families inside the city of Poznań. That set of listings, 1870-1931, Poznań Archives fond 474: Records of the City of Posen. See http://szukajwarchiwach.pl/53/474/0/19.3/str/1/100#tabJednostki. [There is a similar list for Bydgoszcz but, so far, no indication of its posting. See http://baza.archiwa.gov.pl/sezam/pradziad.php?l=pl&mode=showopis&id=19783&miejscowosc=bydgoszcz.] Information includes birth dates and places, and sometimes the names of parents. The cards also note movements of the families within the city or to and from the city. Click on "Digital Copies" to the right of the red arrow with the call number in it. A page with 15 thumbnails will display. It is possible to set the page size as high as 100 thumbnails. The problem is that the records, other than the surname, which is in Roman letters, are written mostly in Gothic script, making them very difficult for most people to read. Although they should be in alphabetical order, that is not always the case so it is necessary to search earlier and later records. Alphabetical order is generally based on the Polish spelling of a particular name: ALEKSANDR instead of ALEXANDER, RAJCH instead of REICH. To find the Polish spelling of a name of interest, do a Soundex search in the Family Finder or at JRI-Poland to see what spellings appear under Poland. If the name in question is an unusual one, search for one that begins the same way.

For an example of a Duldungs-Certificat, issued under the law of 1 June 1833 to those Jews who met some but not all of the qualifications of the law and thus were not entitled to naturalization, see "Akten betr. die in Folge bewirkter Regulierung des Judenwesens in Posen ausgefertigten Naturalisations-Patente und deshalb geführte Korrespondenz, 1848" in the Akten des Oberpräsidiums Posen, Sygnatur 5078, fol. 6.

The District State Archives in Poznań, as part of the Akta Miasta Rogoźna, Sygnatur 848, has a complete census file of the city of Rogasen (50 km. north from Poznań), which in 1858 was about 30% Jewish. The list, for at least 1,000 Jews in all, includes all families, their house number, the father's profession, age of all family members, and the wife's maiden name.

The following is a sampling of other holdings at the archives in Poznań; it holds a large number of files of former town employees and officials, many of them Jewish prior to 1919:

"Die Angelegenheiten der hiesigen israelitischen Gemeinde," 1832-1836, Naczelny Prezes Prowincji Poznańskiej, 9005 (1833 list of names and some names from 1835), 9006 (some names from 1836-1837 and registration notices, 1838-1840, names 1843, pp. 373-375)

"Die Erwerbung städtischer Grundstücke und ländlicher Güter durch Juden," 1818 - 1835, Naczelny Prezes Prowincji Poznańskiej, 8988

"Die Gesuche um Erteilung des Staatsbürgerrechts für Alttestamentarische Glaubensgenossen und um Erlaubniss zum Afenthalt in anderen Provinzen," 1815-1846, Naczelny Prezes Prowincji Poznańskiej, 8979 (some post-1835 petitions for naturalization and some earlier), 138 leaves. The names of many Jews and their petitions with usually successful results.

"Die Naturalisation der alttestamentischen Glaubensgenossen in Folge des Gestetzes vom 1 Juli 1833," Naczelny Prezes Prowincji Poznańskiej, 1833-1848, 9008-9012: 9008, Lissa naturalizations of 29 May 1835, with 56 names, including autographs and some 1835 registration notices, pp. 125-137; 9009, Pleschen naturalization of Jacob Windmüller, 19 October 1835, pp. 8-10, and 1836 names on correspondence and registration notices; 9010, 1837 names on individual correspondence and registration notices but no name lists; 9011, same for 1839-September 1844; 9012, same from October 1844 to February 1848.

"Die Proposition für die Provinzionallandstände betreffend die Rechtsverhältnisse der Juden im Grossherzogthum Posen," 1827-1828, Naczelny Prezes Prowincji Poznańskiej, 8990. 19 November 1827 count of Jewish population by town. No names of persons but professions enumerated.

"Rede des David Caro, gehalten am 14 April 1834," Naczelny Prezes Prowincji Poznańskiej, 9005, leaves 140-153.

"Die Regulierung der staatsbürgerlichen Verhältnisse der alttestamentarischen Glaubensgebossen in Grossherzogsthum Posen," 1815-1818, Naczelny Prezes Prowincji Poznańskiej, 8975-8978. In the last file mentioned, list of first and additional naturalizations of Jews, sheets 297-303.

"Akten betr. den jüdischen Verein der Wohltätigen Freunde," 1877 - 1912, Prezydium Policji w Poznaniu, 4679, includes Statut des Vereins der Wohltätigen Freunde, revidiert 1869, Posen; Statut des Vereins der Wohltätigen Freunde, revidiert 1873, Posen; Statut des Vereins der Wohltätigen Freunde, Posen 1879, Jahresberichten für die Jahren 1879 - 1901. Contains a list of members in alphabetical order for 1908 (?). Leaves 295, 296 and 312 are lists for what is probably 1907. Many annual reports with lists of officers.

"Akten betr. Errichtung eines neuen Friedhofes für die Synagogen-Gemeinde," 1910-1915, Prezydium Policji w Poznaniu, 5093, includes Ordnung für den Glogauerstrasse nr. 50 belegenen Friedhof der Synagogen-Gemeinde zu Posen (Posen 1903), plans and official correspondence of the Jewish Community with the municipal government referring to organization of a new cemetery at Berliner Straße (there is also a press clipping from Posener Tageblatt 1914 of the opening of the new cemetery in 1914).

"Akten betr. den israelitischen Friedhof, 1874-1899," Prezydium Policji w Poznaniu, 5084: includes plans and project of some new buildings for the Jewish cemetery at Glogauerstraße in 1895 and 1898 (pp. 114, 126, 211, 220, 229)

"Akten betr. die Statuten des israelitischen Handlugsdiener Instituts, jetzt Verein junger Kaufleute," 1843-1893, Prezydium Policji w Poznaniu, 4675, includes: Statuten des israelitischen Handlungsdiener Instituts zu Posen, Posen 1844, with the names of officers on 27 January 1844 and lists of members on leaves 21-22 (= pp. 12-13). Officers are also listed in the 1860 Statut of the Verein, 24 pp., appearing on leaves 48-70.

"Duldungs-Certificat für Wittwe Hanne. Danziger, beb. Kalisch," Poznań 2 IX 1841, Prezydium Policji w Poznaniu, 5078 (Akten betr. die in Folge bewirkter Regulierung des Judenwesens in Posen ausgefertigten Naturalisations-Patente und deshalb geführte Korrespondenz), k. 6. The certificate also covers her children Caroline, Jacob, Isidor, and Ruben. The file contains February to April 1848 naturalizations with the signature of each such person naturalized.

"Lebenslauf W[olff] I[saac] Eichborn," 1842-1881, Prezydium Policji w Poznaniu, 5075, 137 leaves.

"Wilhelm Kantorowicz," Akta miasta Poznania, 2712, includes Kantorowicz's obituary published by the municipal government in Posener Tageblatt, 27 I 1894. He died Posen 24 January 1894. The notice was published in No. 44 of 28 January 1894, dated 27 January 1894.

Wolf Kronthal, Akta m. Poznania, 2720, includes the letter, dated 4 June 1921, sent by Arthur Kronthal from Berlin to the municipal government:
"Dem magistrat der Stadt Poznań spreche ich für das mir heute übersdandte wertvolle Kunstwerk, die hervorragend schöne Radierung des alten Rathhauses, und die meine bescheidene Tätigkeit weit überschätzenden Widmungsworke meinen hertzlichen Dank aus.

"Als alter Posener, dessen Familie nachweislich seit der Mitte des XVII Jahrhunderts in Posen ansässig war, ist das Rathaus für mich das Wahrzeichen der Stadt, deren Geschichte mit dem Bau dieses ältesten eigenartigsten und schönsten Profanarchitekturwerks aufs engste Verknüpft ist. Das von der Meisterhand Peter Halms geschaffene Kunstblatt wird auch nach meinem Scheiden aus Poznań in meinem jetzigen neuen Wohnorte immer die Verbindung mit der alten Heimat sichtbar zum Ausdruck bringen: mit der Stadt, der ich innerlich stets treu bleiben werde und von der ich sehnlichts Wünsche und Hoffe, daß sie sich wirtschaftlich, kulturell und künstlerisch weiterentwickeln und wachsen blühen und gedeihen möge. Mit nochmaligen herzlichsten Danke in vorzüglicher Hochachtung ganz ergebenst - Arthur Kronthal

"Akten betreffend Ostverband für Jugendpflege ... Rechenschaftsbericht über die Tätigkeit des Jüdischen Turnvereins Posen für das Jahr 1913," 13 pp., Akta m. Poznania, 2867, including a list of officers and offices, p. 10. Dr. Leo Cohn, Flora Brand, Moritz Sachs, Ignatz Wohl, Leo Kollenscher, Marie Baer, Oskar Schwartz, Puala Risch, Georg Baer. The file includes the history of the organization and other names of persons.

"Reorganisation des städtischen Volkschulwesens (jüdischen), 1868-1917," Akta m. Poznania, sygn. 2846

a. The Central Archives for the History of the Jewish People, Hi-Tech Village 3/4, Giv'at Ram Campus, Hebrew University of Jerusalem; postal address: POB 39077, Jerusalem 91390; ☎972-2-6586249; Fax 972-2-6535426; E-Mail: <archives@vms.huji.ac.il>; website: <http://sites.huji.ac.il/archives>. Local hours: Sunday through Thursday, 8:15 a. m. to 3:15 p. m.; Friday, 8:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m. The following list omits the microfilms of Polish records filmed by the archives. The archives has a policy of not microfilming records that are basically limited to births, marriages, and deaths. A new guide to the holdings of the archives is in preparation by the Israel Archives Association. The dates, call numbers, and meters listed below were compiled in 1973 and are no longer reliable but is the latest currently available. Two numbers with a dash between them in the Call number column indicates the total number of items. Descriptions of holdings do not necessarily cover the entire dates shown. See also Teller, A[dam], Guide... for the holdings in the Central Archives, in "Selected Bibliography," "Bibliographies and Reference Works with Respect to Libraries and Archives." Every year in Tsiyon [Zion], Jerusalem: ha-Hevrah ha-historit ha-Yisre'elit, which began in 1935, with an index for the first 20 years in Vol. 20, the Central Archives and its predecessor have noted new acquisitions. A sample selection follows:

Various materials on Koschmin, including religious school schedule, 1915-1918.

Histories of Bojanowo, Obornik, and Pinne.

J. Peczkowski's lecture on the Jewish school in Nakel

Akiva (Arthur) B. Posner: History of the Jewish communities [1800-1936] of Poznań, Koschmin, Labischin, and Samter and other locations, totaling about 50 items, each of article length. All unpublished manuscripts. See inventory on the Central Archives website, http://sites.huji.ac.il/archives/RP040%20Posner.pdf [in German]. Posner's three published books on the same theme appear in the Selected Bibliography under Czarnikau, Gnesen, Rawicz.

For example, Posner, Arthur, Zur Geschichte der jüdischen Gemeinde und der jüdischen Familien in Bojanowo, Provinz Posen, Jerusalem, 1953. Not seen. 1953 may refer to the acquisition date.

(No. 1497.) Allehöchste Kabinetsorder vom 22sten Dezember 1833., betreffend die in Bezug auf den §. 21 der vorläufigen Verordnung über das Judenwesen im Großherzogthum Posen vom 1sten Juni 1833. erlassene Allehöchste Bestimmung über die Familien-Namen der Juden in dieser Provinz.

Auf Ihren Antrag vom 18ten v. M. setze Ich, zum §. 21 der vorläufigen Verordnung über das Judenwesen im Großherzogthum Posen vom 1sten Juni d. J. fest: daß alle, auch die zur Naturalisation noch nicht qualifizirten dortigen Juden verpflichtet seyn sollen, einen bestimmten Familien-Namen anzunehmen, unter welchem sie in das anzulegende Verzeichniß einzutragen und in den §. 22 vorgeschriebenen Zertifikaten aufzuführen sind. Die Regierungen, denen die Genehmigung der gewählten Familien-Namen sowohl für die naturalisirten, als der zur Naturalisation noch nicht geeigneten Juden zusteht, haben hierbei darauf zu halten, daß die Familien-Namen von den bisherigen jüdischen Namen nicht abweichen, zugleich auch dahin zu sehen, daß dieses in Ansehung der Vornamen beobachtet werde, welche die jüdischen Eltern den Kindern beilegen. Sie haben diese Bestimmung durch die Gesetz-Sammlung zur allgemeinen Kenntniß zu bringen.

(No. 1497.) Royal Privy Council Order of the 22nd of December 1833, concerning His Majesty's Decree with respect to the family names of the Jews [of Posen], under §21. of the provisional decree on Jewish affairs in the Grand Duchy of Posen, dated the first of June 1833.

With respect to your proposal of the 18th of this month, I have decreed pursuant to §21. of the provisional decree on Jewish affairs in the Grand Duchy of Posen, dated the first of June 1833: Both naturalized and not-yet-naturalized Jews should be required to adopt a specific family name under which in the proposed index they are registered and, pursuant to §22. of the aforesaid [decree], certificates will be issued. The local administrative governments will need to assent to the chosen family name for both naturalized and not-yet-qualified Jews and prevent any deviation of the family name from the aforesaid Jewish name, and simultaneously to see that first names which Jewish parents give to their children are recorded. You should publish this decision in the legal compendium to inform the public.

Berlin, the 22nd day of December 1833.

Friedrich Wilhelm.

List of City Directories for Towns in Areas Formerly in Posen and Posen Jews Living in Shanghai

The list below shows the towns for which city directories are known to be available online and at the Staatsbibliothek zu Berlin [State Library at Berlin], Haus I, D-10117 Berlin, Unter den Linden 8, Postfach Nr. 1312, Germany; ☎011-49-30-20151326; FAX: 011-49-30-20151719, telex: 112757, while some holdings are at the Biblioteka Główna Uniwersytetu im. Adama Mickiewicza [Adam Mickiewicz University Library (formerly, the Kaiser Wilhelm II Library)], ul. Ratajczaka 38/40, 61-816 Poznań, Poland; ☎52-74-16; and other holdings indicated below are at the Wojewódzka i Miejska Biblioteka Publiczna, ul. Długa 41, 85-034 Bydgoszcz; central ☎22-46-71 to 75. For a complete list of available directories for the area, as well as some other German areas, see <http://wiki-de.genealogy.net/Kategorie:Online-Adressbuch>.

The numbers below refer to the years available in Berlin. If a year is in brackets, it is known to have been produced but is not available in Berlin due to war losses. Two numbers separated by a hyphen indicate that every year between those two dates is available. Years listed in italics are known to exist in Germany, but the exact location is unknown. All German citations refer to the Staatsbibliothek zu Berlin, Haus I with the prefix "Sz", the symbol for all books on the subject of Posen. The author' experience was that not all books listed as available in Berlin actually were. The Posen city directory for 1913 is available at the Deutsche Nationalbibliothek, Leipzig, Germany, as are many other city directories. Those years followed by an * show which volumes are available in full-text on the Digital Library of Wielkopolska, <http://www.wbc.poznan.pl>; for English-language titles and descriptions of some of the available publications, including city directories, with links to them, see <http://www.birchy.com/GenWiki/index.php?title=Digital_Library_of_Wielkopolska>. Additional items are added weekly. See the Selected Bibliography for other citations to works about Adreßbücher.

A Polish-language directory for the entire Province of Posen with a history of the province and lists of merchants from all locations is available online. Księga kupiectwa i przemysłu polskiego w Wielkim Księstwie Poznańskiem, Poznań: Nakładem "straży," Drukiem "pracy" sp. z. ogr. por. w Poznaniu, 1908, 344 pp. At Biblioteka Kórnicka PAN, and available online at http://www.wbc.poznan.pl/publication/1284. Mosse, Rudolf, ed., Deutsches Reichs-Adressbuch für Industrie, Gewerbe und Handel, Berlin: Verlag des Deutschen Reichs-Adressbuchs G. m. b. H. Library of Congress, Washington, DC, Microfilm 28125 HF. Vols. 1-72, 1909-1941. The Library of Congress holds the years 1909, 1918, 1929-1941; Ancestry.com has the 1902-1903 edition, 1. Band. Arranged by kingdom within the Empire, then by province, within the kingdom with a map of the province at the start of the provincial listings, then by the city within the province, then by the specific trade or profession, and, finally, listing the individual businesses or persons in alphabetical order. See Cymbler, Jeffrey K., "Nineteenth- and Twentieth Century Polish Directories as Resources for Genealogical Information," Avotaynu: The International Review of Jewish Genealogy, Teaneck, NJ: Avotaynu, Inc., Vol. 13, No. 1, Spring 1997, pp. 25-31, esp. p. 29. DS101.A87. Cymbler indicates that the Genealogical Society of Utah holds microfilms for 1898, 1905, 1911, 1915, 1917, 1926, 1933-1935, and 1938-1939, listed under "Germany—Directories" in the catalogue of its microfilm holdings. The last volume of between 3 and 6 volumes, depending upon the year, of each directory includes an alphabetical list of towns with the corresponding page number of the listing of that town in the earlier volumes for that year. Generally, the listings do not include the addresses of the persons listed. On p. 31, Cymbler lists two different publications entitled "Adressbuch der Adressbücher." The first one which Cymbler lists appears in the Selected Bibliography of this book, "Bibliographies

..." section, under "Centralstelle für Adressbücher und Adressenwesen." The second book of that name was published in Cologne by M. DuMont Schauberg in 1930, and is outside the scope of this book, which examines Posen until 1918. Rudolf Mosse published similar books for Poland after 1918, some of which are online in full-text on the Digital Libraries Federation webpages.

Page xiv of the Introduction discusses Ribbe, Wolfgang, and Henning, Eckhart, Taschenbuch für Familiengeschichtsforschung, CS18.T36 2001. That work contains Christel Wegeleben's article, "Adreßbücher," on pp. 344-370, with a bibliography, pp. 369-370, in the 12th edition, and the article on pp. 301-329 in the 11th edition, listing "all thus far identified city directories published for all German towns," but the article gives no location for the directories. Some city directories listed in this chapter are not mentioned in the Wegeleben article. There is a 13 eidtion of the Taschenbuch.

Since many Posen Jews moved to Berlin after 1918, see the Jüdisches Adreßbuch für Groß-Berlin, Berlin, Goedega Verlags-Gesellschaft [n.d.], for 1929/1930 [on microfilm 07690 DS at the Library of Congress, and DS135.G4B455] and for 1931 (1994 Reprint), available at the U. S. Holocaust Memorial Museum Library on reference.

A country directory that lists some wealthy Jewish landowners is *Adressbuch des Grundbesitzes im Grossherzogthum Posen dem Areal nach von 500 Morgen aufwärts: Mit Angabe des Gutes, der speciellen Culturarbeiten, des Grundsteuer-Reinertrages, des Besitzers resp. Pächters, der nächsten Post-, Eisenbahn- und Telegraphen-Stationen und der Industriezweige, welche auf dem betreffenden Gute betrieben werden/Wykaz alfabetyczny wszystkich posiadłości ziemskich w W. Chapter 8

Old Prussian Money, Weights, and Measures

I. a. Money in Use in Posen between 1772 and 1876

South Prussia issued three copper coins from 1796 to 1798:

Solidus in 1796 and 1797
½ grossus in 1796 and 1797
Grossus from 1796 to 1798

In 1816 and 1818 Posen issued two copper coins, 1 groschen and 3 groschen, as a special issue for Posen. The coins were marked A for Berlin or B for Breslau to indicate the place of minting.

As trade coins, Prussia issued the following gold coins that were used in South Prussia:

10 ducats in 1781, 1 ducat in 1787, 1790 and 1803.

The following gold coins were issued in Prussia to 1855:

½ Friedrich d'or
Friedrich d'or
2 Friedrich d'or

In 1858 Prussia issued the ½ Krone and the Krone gold coins.

The Prussian half groschen and silbergroschen circulated in Posen while it was in general Prussian circulation from 1821 to 1873.

From von Sanden, Alfred, Zur Geschichte der Lissaer Schule 1555-1905 [Festschrift zur 350-jährigen Jubelfeier des Königlichen Comenius-Gymnasiums zu Lissa], Lissa: Friedrich Ebbeckes Verlag, June 1905, 104 pp., including index of high school graduates, pp. 93-96. At Harvard University; at Staatsbibliothek zu Berlin, Haus II, 4°109742; and online in full-text at <http://www.wbc.poznan.pl/Content/51468/directory.djvu>. Relevant excerpts at Leo Baeck Institute, Edward Luft Collection, AR 6957, location: S42/5. As a result of the decree of 10 August 1873, the Jewish religion became a subject taught in schools. The only teacher in Lissa from then until 1905 [or later] was Rabbi Dr. Samuel Baeck, p. 50. Teachers: 30. Gerson Reiser, 20 May 1889 to Joh. 1889, later position as senior teacher at the Berger-Oberrealschule in Posen; 33. Paul Salomon, Joh. 1892 to 3 September 1892, later senior teacher at Realgymnasium in Bromberg; 39. Dr. Julius Lichtenstein, New Years 1896 to Easter 1899, later, senior teacher Gymnasium in Fraustadt; 44. Joseph Wolff, Easter 1904 to Joh. 1904, Cand. prob. in Posen, p. 74. Dr. Samuel Baeck, rabbi and preacher of the Jewish Community in Lissa, teacher of the Jewish religion, since 10 July 1873, p. 76.

The 70 Jews attending the school in 1905 constituted 20.4% of the total enrollment at the time. The religion of the specific students was not specified so those selected are believed to be the 70 persons.

List of Jewish Graduates from Various High Schools in Posen Province

The deceased Consul General Karl Mankiewicz died in Dresden on 4 May 1896, creating a scholarship in Lissa in his will.

The banker Simon Levy from Lissa created a scholarship for students at the school as described in a 3 November 1855 letter.. His testament was dated 23 May 1863.

The Löbel Joel Halberstadt (of Lissa) scholarship was created in his testament dated 18 March 1860.

Joseph Abraham Moll, businessman, created a scholarship on 12 January 1874. The scholarship was to be awarded without regard to class or religion.

Dr. E. Buttermilch, general practitioner in Lissa, created a testamentary scholarship on 16 September 1875, to be awarded each year on the anniversary of his death, 2 May.

Privy health counselor Dr. L. Hollstein wrote on 11 May 1875 from Berlin that he was a graduate of the school, having attended from Easter 1825 until 1832. He died on 31 December 1892 and his testament provided the scholarship.

Frau Dorothea Samter, née Beer, of Lissa in her testament of 27 April 1876, left a legacy to the Jewish Community of Lissa, half to aid five poor Jewish persons and the other half to aid a Jewish student at the school.

Frau Bertha Salisch, née Marbe, of Lissa, bequeathed a legacy to the Jewish Corporation of Lissa to aid yearly three Jewish students of the school and two Christian students.

The Julius Glogauer scholarship, created by businessman Heymann Glogauer, is awarded annually on 22 November to a Jewish student in the Unter- or Obertertia.

The Professor Julius Toeplitz scholarship, created in his memory by former students of Professor Toeplitz, is awarded without regard to religion or nationality.

Of the four scholarships not controlled by the school, one was created by a Jew. Of the 18 scholarships administered by the school, half had a Jewish connection even though the school's percentage of Jewish students never approached half the attendees.

Bessert spells Lande as Landé.

The 1895 Annual Report, p. 19, of the school indicates that from 1874 to Johannis 1884, which was shortly before his death, Rabbi Dr. Freimann was the teacher of Jewish religion at the school, followed by headteacher Haym from Michaelis 1884 until at least 1895 while Rabbi Dr. Pleßner also taught at the same time starting on 1 May 1886 until at least 1895. Haupt is not otherwise profiled in the review of teachers that year. Joseph Fleischer, born 29 January 1843 in Krotoschin, was a student teacher and assistant teacher in Ostrowo until his death on 25 December 1875, p. 20.

According to Bessert, p. 58, the Ostrowo school rabbi from 1907 onward was Dr. Leopold Neuhaus. The Jewish principal teacher was Haym since Michaelis [October] 1884. He gives the following Ostrowo Jewish school population:

There were 3 Jewish schoolchildren in 1822 in the city of Posen, p. 43. In 1839 there were 164 boys and 135 girls of the Jewish faith in schools in Posen city when the population was 8,522 Jews, p. 44. There were 45 Jewish schools in 1844 in 1844 and 82 Jewish schooling sites; and 5 Jewish teachers resigned in 1844, p. 132. The Louisen-Schule in Posen at the end of 1844 had 25 Jewish students, p. 137. The article lists the number of Jews in various towns, p. 141. Part III: March, "Das Elementarschulwesen im Departement Posen," pp. 131-143. For 1844, 45 Jewish schools and 82 Jewish established teaching locations in Regierungsbezirk Posen, p. 132. 5 Jewish voluntary departures, 5 non-teacher candidate students, p. 133. For 1843, 5 Jewish vacated schooling sites, p. 133. In 1844 54,689 Jewish inhabitants, including 7,408 Jewish school attendees, p. 136. 25 Jewish students in the Luisen-Schule at the end of 1844, p. 137. No names of students.

At Biblioteka im. Adama Mickiewicza, Pracownia DŻS; and at Raczyński Library, CII3308. Schools in the following cities are discussed (founding date in parentheses) on pp. 25 and 26, except as otherwise indicated: Babimost/Bomst (1849); Inowrocław/Hohensalza (1831); Jutrosin/Jutroschin (1840), supported by the Scottish Protestants. Money came from Madam Baxter of Edinburgh. For a long time , the school had no building so classes were held outside. Thus, many children could not attend for lack of appropriate clothes. One teacher there taught the children the New Testament. The parents told the teacher that they would remove the students unless he stopped teaching the New Testament; Kcynia/Exin (1840); Kępno/Kempen (1834); Margonin (1828); Obornik/Oborniki (1851); Osieczna/Storchnest (1829), financed by the English, it had a separate building with up to 45 children attending. First served by 3 teachers; operated until 1870 when it closed for lack of students. Also a Jewish religious school operated at the same time, supported by the Jewish community, p. 25; Piaseczna Góra/Sandberg (1832), now Piaski Wlkp. (1832), one of the first evangelists was Ernst Korn, who came from Kożuchow in 1834. While he was a teacher there, the school's name was "Christian Free School." Later it was closed and reopened in 1837. In 1851 August Freymark, another teacher, taught 50 Jewish boys and girls. In addition to the usual primary subjects, he taught Latin and French. The Jews trusted him, and he obtained a free apartment and an annual salary of 125 Thalers. The next teacher from 1852-1869 was Jungermann from Inowrocław. The Jews liked him; Poznań/Posen (December 1826); Rogoźno/Rogasen (1834); Schlichtyngowa/Schlichtingsheim (1831), financed by the English, but it had bigger problems than in Oscieczna. The local government pressured Jews there to open a communal school. Closed after 19 years when it had only 6 Jewish children; Wschowa/Fraustadt (1834).

The Christian Pietists quickly discovered that without Jewish emancipation, it would be difficult to convert the Jews and decided to teach secular subjects as well as Christianity in their schools for Jews, pp. 24-25. Conversions were few, but missionary schools proved to be the most convenient form of making contact with both Jewish youth and their parents. Boys and girls were separated. Unitl 1851, there were 13 such schools, but two years later, there were only 12; every year thereafter the number of students decreased. The majority of students were girls because the Jewish community devoted less effort to Jewish education so sending them to Christian schools engendered less condemnation for girls to attend such schools. The support of such schools was based upon donations to the Society for Supporting Missions to the Jews, especially from the English and Scottish branches. These branches sent their own teachers to the schools which they supported. Sometimes these teachers were converted Jews who saw the only possibility to give their fellow Jews Christian ideas in missionary work, p. 25. Mission schools were very attractive for the Jews since the schools observed all Jewish holidays, the schools and books were free; and the children could attend voluntarily. However, the government wanted to make attendance obligatory. In the 1850s the Poznań Mission started to weaken. In 1845 the school in Wschowa closed. In the next few years almost all the other schools closed. By 1869 there were only 3 schools. In 1874 the last one in Piaski closed because the local head of the Christian church did not like idea of having such schools. After 1848, Jewish emancipation in the Poznań area took place so the Mission lost its importance, p. 26, whereupon the Mission devoted itself to religious services until 1914, p.27.

A table showing the number of Jews in the school for each year from 1837-1873, but no names, p. 28. §40 of the statute of 16 July 1837, creating the Luisenschule, states that it is exclusively for the instruction in religion to Christian students. Thus, Jewish school girls generally went elsewhere, with about 10% of the students being Jewish. Other Jewish students went to the Pupke school (In 1809 there were 46 Christian girls in attendance and 57 Jewish girls.) or they attended the training school of Director Barth, which opened in 1840. After 1848, the restrictions were revised, and the percentage of Jewish schoolgirls rose to over 50% while the number of Christian schoolgirls declined, p. 31. Commercial advisor Bernhard Jaffé supported a measure in the city council to make the school a state school, which it became on 24 June 1873, p. 34. The emancipation of the Jews gave unlimited entry to the Jewish schoolchildren into the Luisenschule, which derived major income from the training college, p. 51.

Selected Bibliography

This list is highly selective and should not be viewed as exhaustive, with many Israeli and Hebrew and Yiddish imprints not listed. Readers should consider whether specialized encyclopedias, such as The Jewish Encyclopedia or the Encyclopaedia Judaica, [see "Bibliographies and Reference Works with Respect to Libraries and Archives"], might provide either relevant information or useful references.

Researchers will always wish to check the general references as well as the specific locations. When checking the specific locations, note that mention may be made in the items listed under Posen Province or under the larger location near the small village for which you may be searching. Thus, a knowledge of the geography of the area is useful.

In the following bibliography, if a book is located in the Library of Congress, no other indication of the location appears. If the book is not located in the Library of Congress but appears in the New York Public Library holdings or at the Leo Baeck Institute, this bibliography so indicates. If the book cannot be found in any of those libraries but is held elsewhere in the United States, all other known locations in the United States appear. If the book is not known to be in the United States, then known foreign locations are listed. Maps are treated separately unless in a listed book. Some of the books are available through the Mormons' Genealogical Society of Utah on microform. Books not indicating a publisher are generally self-published by the author.

The Staatsbibliothek zu Berlin, Haus I, has a number of books on the history of various locations in Posen Province, but all, other than city directories, are general histories of that location in Posen. None is, therefore, likely to contain any significant number of names. Books from that library in the following list are 8° unless otherwise noted. Books originally in libraries in eastern Germany, but now elsewhere, can be located through the Staatsbibliothek's book location service, explained in the "Introduction" to The Naturalized Jews of the Grand Duchy of Posen in 1834 and 1835. The depository library for Germany from 1913 until prior to the end of World War II was the Deutsche Nationalbibliothek, formerly the Deutsche Bücherei, D-04103 Leipzig, Deutscher Platz, Germany. ☎88120. Until 1945 the collection contained virtually every item published in German after 1913. The hours for the catalogue section are Monday through Friday from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m. and Saturday from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m. The reading room and book distribution room are open the same hours on Saturdays but do not close on Mondays through Fridays until 10 p. m. The library also has a map collection open Monday through Friday from 8 a. m. to 4 p. m.

A more useful resource for the researcher of the nineteenth century and earlier is the Universitätsbibliothek, Beethovenstraße 6, D-04107 Leipzig, Germany; ☎391-3310. That library has been collecting for centuries and has a very helpful staff, many of whom speak English. It is located in downtown Leipzig. While many of the Universitätsbibliothek's maps were destroyed as a result of bombing during World War II, its book collection is largely intact, with some items difficult to find in Germany except at the Universitätsbibliothek, Leipzig.

The Abteilung Deutsche Zentralstelle für Genealogie is now located across from the Paunsdorf Center, Leipzig on the S-Bahn line. Most but not all of its film records of Jewish genealogical value are already held by the Genealogical Society of Utah.

Library of Congress call numbers are those for the cited item at the Library of Congress; at other institutions, the call number, even if following the Library of Congress format, may vary. Sometimes, periodicals appearing only once in the Selected Bibliography are not placed in the list of abbreviations and are instead written out in full in the text as are books.

Various German research institutes connected with German universities usually have research projects in progress. One that has paid particular attention to Posen is the Salomon Ludwig Stein-Institut für deutsch-jüdische Geschichte, Geibelstr. 41, D-47057 Duisburg, Germany; ☎011-49-203-370071; FAX: 011-49-203-373380; E-mail: <institut@sti1.uni-duisburg.de>; WorldWideWeb site: http://www.sti1.uni-duisburg.de. Others in Hamburg, Cologne, Leipzig, and Warsaw have also done work on Posen Jews. All of these institutions are building libraries on the Jews, usually with some part devoted to the Jews of Posen. Most also publish a journal which usually appears quarterly. The one for the Steinheim Institute is called Kalonymos: Beiträge zur deutsch-jüdischen Geschichte aus dem Salomon-Ludwig-Steinheim-Institut [Duisburg], available at the Library of Congress, DS135.G3A2613, and at the New York Public Library, *PXS 01-891; at Leo Baeck Institute, New York City, Periodicals, P-C149 (lacks Vol. 5, Heft 1, 2002); and at http://sti1.uni-duisburg.de/publikationen/kalonymos/index.xml, the best source for all issues.

The researcher may access the more recent acquisitions of the Biblioteka Narodowa, the Polish National Library, Warsaw, at http://www.bn.org.pl and send E-mail to <biblnar@bn.org.pl>. The website includes an English version. For German searches, try the Karlsruhe Virtual Catalogue at http://www.ubka.uni-karlsruhe.de. It includes some other catalogues and has an English version.

When doing a thorough search, researchers will also wish to check JewishGen® on the WorldWideWeb at http://www.jewishgen.org. JewishGen offers access to Special Interest Groups, a short course in research in formerly German regions of Poland, a Shtetl Seeker, a Family Finder, a list of record indexing for Poland, a yiskor book project (bibliography), and other services. For specific research, see "Jewish Genealogical Research in the former Prussian Province of Posen" on JewishGen, with links to several web sites (including archives, maps, telephone directories, etc.), a short bibliography, and some information on the organization of Jewish communities in Posen. Researchers interested in German-Jewish and Polish-Jewish genealogy outside of Posen will also find items of interest. Use the link http://www.jewishgen.org/infofiles/PosenResources.html. The information was created by Steven Fischbach, Providence, RI, <fischri@gmail.com> with advice from the author of The Jews of Posen Province. Fox, David M., in "Internet Corner," Avotaynu, Vol. 15, No. 2, Summer 1999, pp. 59-63, at p. 62, states, "...this is an outstanding list of resources for this area."

For a virtually complete list of those periodicals on microfilm held by the Leo Baeck Institute, New York City and supplemented from other sources, see www.lexisnexis.com/academic/2upa/Sjs/German-Jewish PeriodcalsLeoBaeck.asp. A number of large research libraries, including the Library of Congress, hold some or all of these microfilm copies. It is a very large collection of German-language serials from Europe and Israel.

The Jewish Encyclopedia is available online at http://jewishencyclopedia.com and at http://sammlungen.ub.uni-frankfurt.de/freimann/content/titleinfo/181899, and offers both a modern version and the original imprint with illustrations while the 1911 edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica is available at www.1911encyclopedia.org in a modern typeface and contains no illustrations. There are many other resources available online.

Researchers should routinely check the Digital Library of Wielkopolska and Google Books to see which out-of-copyright items cited here are available in full-text online. The Mormons have sometimes microfilmed books and other items, so if you are not near a library holding a copy of a given book, check https://familysearch.org/catalog-search to see if the Mormons have filmed it. The microfilm can then be ordered for a fee to a Family History Center, https://familysearch.org/locations/centerlocator?c=, near the reader.

A Polish website in English and in Polish with useful information, maps, and photographs of the former Jewish quarter in each of a large number of the towns in Posen Province is <http://www.sztetl.org.pl/?app=city&lang=en_GB>. In many cases the names of individual Jewish inhabitants during a given period are listed. Check the "History" on the left of the page.

Some books in Hebrew may be available in full-text for a fee at <http://www.hebrewbook.com>.

This German periodical, published by the Verein für Familienforschung in Ost- und Westpreußen (VfFOW), Hamburg, includes coverage of the Netze District (1772-1806), much of which became part of the Grand Duchy of Posen (Province in 1848) in 1815, p. 10. Cites Hungerecker, Siegfried, "Judensachen—Quellen zur Erforschung jüdischer Familien in 18. Jh." [Jewish Matters—Sources for Researching Jewish Families in the Eighteenth Century], APG, Neue Folge [Post 1945 Series], Vol. 21, 1991, pp. 397-410. [APG appears irregularly.] The article provides information for holdings on Jews in the Geheimes Staatsarchiv Preußische Kulturbesitz [Prussian Privy State Archives], , Archivstraße 12-14, D-14195 Berlin-Dahlem, and lists names [none apparently for any location in Posen, p. 11. Notes that Edward David Luft has stated that many Jews from Posen Province migrated to Breslau and Glogau; notes localities mentioned as being in the Netze District or in South Prussia (1793-1806), and notes the existence of "Acta wegen der Juden in den Distrikten an der Netze [Documents regarding the Jews in the Districts of the Netze River] for the period 1773-1806, p. 13, and listing the following surnames: Abraham, Arend, Baer, Casper, Feibusch, Haschin, Hirsch, Isaac, Leyser, Littmann, Markus, Meyer, Moses, Nochin, Schaul, Schmoll/Schmul, Simon, and Wulff/Wolff; names not otherwise listed but possibly relevant include Koppel and Paysach; lists the localities in the Netze District which became part of Posen in 1815 and lists identified subjects relevant to Jews in the files at the Geheimes Staatsarchiv, p. 14. Some of the information may apply to other archives as well if they contain files on "Judensachen." Most of the article deals with archival matters between 1772 and 1815, especially from 1793-1806. It appears that the author of the article has not actually reviewed the files in Berlin.

No index. CD1757.5B93W35 1998. Deals with how to find files and an understanding of how to use the archival system to the best advantage, covering the period 1772-30 May 1853, the date of the coming into force of a new town law. The book gives a detailed explanation of the organization and administration of archives in the Bydgoszcz region with examples from the period of Prussian/German administration. Almost all towns with Jewish inhabitants had a separate set of fonds for Jews and sometimes a separate fond for the Jewish schools. No names.

Mention of a Posen leader, Markus, son of Meier, a financial broker; reproduces a 24 July 1568 decree by Polish king Sigismund August, p. 101. He was a member of the Jewish community of Posen and owned a house in the Judenstraße, near the synagogue. He was the first in 1559 to have water from the city waterworks in his house, paying 42 groschen yearly for the service. In 1561 he was listed in the city council books along with Joseph Sloma and Salomo of Gnesen as the first under the Jewish elders to have a stall for horned cattle. In 1569 he obtained a privilege stipulating that no privilege possessed by a debtor could be used to override his rights as a creditor; the courts were bound by this privilege. He held high social position. He opposed restrictions on the printing of Talmudic and Hebraic printing and was responsible for these points being recorded in the Posen real property books so that we know about them, p. 102.

I and II).
The privileges reproduced in Vol. II are 67. Bojanowo, pp. 33-34; 73. Fordon, pp. 48-51; 75. Gniezno, pp. 54-57; 78. Janowiec, pp. 69-72; 79. Kępno (1), pp. 73-75; 80. Kępno (2), pp. 76-77; 84. Rawicz (2), pp. 214-215; and 115. Ryczywół, pp. 219-222.
The 1724 Jewish privilege for Ostrów Wielkopolski specifically noted the need for Jewish skills in trade and commerce; the privilege for Międzychod Jews provided for the exclusion of non-local Jews from trade except on market days; the 1725 Lwówek Jewish privilege only forbid harm to those living there; p. 3. The 1789 Pniewy Jewish privilege provided that if a market day coincided with a Jewish holiday, then the Jews were exempted from the annual payment to the municipal teacher in recompense, p. 4. The Wronki Jewish privilege provided for the erection of a prayer house, p. 6, n. 8. In Oborniki, the city fathers held that shops opened on the corners of the town square were on the town square, which was forbidden under the Jewish privilege, p. 9. The Swarzędz Jewish privilege regulated the size of Jewish houses, p. 9, n. 18. The Kępno Jewish privilege demarcated a separate Jewish district of the town; Christians were forbidden to own property in the Jewish district; the 1789 Pniewy Jewish privilege prohibited Christians, and especially women, to eat, drink, converse, or serve Jews and provided that all violators were to be punished, p. 9. The Koźmin Jewish privilege provided that Christians who did not come to the aid of a Jew who cried out were to be punished; the Leszno Jewish privilege provided that Jews were forbidden to sell at retail locally produced textiles but were not forbidden to sell wholesale textiles produced elsewhere, p. 10. The Międzychod Jewish privilege provided that receiving stolen goods used in Christian religious services subjected the whole Jewish community to punishment, pp. 10-11. The Koźmin Jewish privilege contained a similar provision and also provided that Catholics could not become members of a guild in which Jews were members, p. 11. The Leszno Jewish privilege provided that the Jews had to build and maintain bridges and fortifications, p. 12. The Kępno and Pniewy Jewish privileges provided that Jews were sometimes exempted from seigniorial duties; the Koźmin Jewish privilege provided that money rents replaced the obligation to supply the lord with horses and carts while the Oborniki Jewish privilege did the same with respect to tallow, and the Oborniki and Rawicz Jewish privileges did the same in place of the obligation to buy salt, herring, cattle, and linen cloth at special prices fixed by the landlord's agent, p. 13. The replacement of money rents for feudal obligations was especially common in Wielkopolska; the 1618 Rawicz de non tolerandis Iudaeis city privilege was gradually abolished but in 1692 only six Jewish families were allowed to settle there initially, p. 14. While living in France after his abdication, former king Stanisław Leszczyński confirmed the Jewish privilege in his hereditary town of Leszno; the 1724 Ostrów Wielkopolski Jewish privilege, issued by the Crown Treasurer, commended the Jews' commercial skills and abilities, p. 15. The Marshal of the Crown Tribunal issued the Kępno Jewish privilege; original privileges exist for Bojanowo, Koźmin, Leszno, and Rawicz, p. 16, while authenticated copies exist for Gniezno, Oborniki, and Ryczywół; the Geheimes Staatsarchiv in Berlin holds the Latin text of the Gniezno Jewish privilege and German translations of the Koźmin and Międzychod Jewish privileges, p. 17, and one of two Jewish community privileges of Rawicz; the Gesamtarchiv der deutschen Juden holds a German translation of the Lwówek Jewish privilege while the Archiwum Państwowe w Poznaniu holds a Polish version; the Bojanowo Jewish privilege is in the Geheimes Staatsarchiv in Berlin, General Direktorium Südpreußen; copies of the Jewish privileges for Krotoszyn and Nakło and for the Jewish musicians of Leszno are missing from the Archiwum Państwowe w Poznaniu although listed in the inventory, but quotations from them may be found in Warschauer, Adolf, Die Städtischen Archive ... [See "German Archival and Other Unpublished Sources"]; some other Jewish community privileges may be in castle or district court records, and some are published in volumes extracting documents from these sources while others are in the Archiwum Główne Akt Dawnych or in the Archiwum Państwowe w Poznaniu, and some might be in church archives, municipal archives, p. 18, or in other manuscript collections, or might exist but might not be in Poland today, p. 19. All of the privileges set out at length in Vols. I and II are useful for ascertaining who were the lords at the time of the issuance of the privileges and any confirmations and for ascertaining where the privilege or copy is now located. The latter point is important because that location may well hold other documents in collections useful for determining which Jews lived at that location, sometimes by name. The author thanks Edward Luft for assistance in preparing the final version of the essay, p. 87. This article is one of the few comprehensive reviews of medieval Polish Jewry and a very thorough review of medieval Jewish history in Poland, mostly arranged by locality. Shortly after 1455 Rabbi Moses Minc left Mainz and settled in Poznań; mention of Gaspar da Gama, a Jew of Poznań, in the 15th century, p. 123. Rabbi Juda Loew ben Bezalel, known as the Maharal of Prague, was born in 1525 in Poznań and moved to Prague, moving back to Poznań, where he was rabbi 1586-1588 and 1592-1597. He died Prague 22 August 1608, p. 124.A discussion of Poznań court records mentioning Jews, often in an economic context. Some Jewish names are mentioned for the period 1409-1507, pp. 127-129. Jews were in Great Poland since the early Middle Ages, as proven by the coins minted there from the 12th century with Hebrew on them in the time of Mieszko III the Old, pp. 34-35. During the Middle Ages, the Jews lived, among other locations in Great Poland, in Poznań and later in Gniezno, Koźmin, Oborniki, and Szamotuły, p. 35 and p. 35, n. 8. In 1264, Prince Bolesław the Pious proclaimed the Privilege of Kalisz, p. 35 and p. 35, n. 9, later confirmed and augmented by King Kazimierz the Great, p. 35. In the 1764-1765 census of the Jewish population in Great Poland, there were a total of 32,908 Jews, with 19,913 of them in Poznań voivodeship and 12,995 in Kalisz voivodeship. In 1837

there were 74,914 Jews in Great Poland, of whom 52,015 lived in the Poznań administrative district and 22,179 lived in the Bydgoszcz administrative district. At that time there were 96 synagogues in the Province. In 1910 there were 25,000 Jews in Posen Province equaling 1.3% of the total population, p. 36.

Adolf Friedrich Karl Streckfuß was listed as "k. preußischen Geheimen Ober-regierungsrathe," and it was his proposal for a two-tiered system that the Prussian authorities adopted in offering limited emancipation to the Jews of Posen. Tye, Jim, "Bremen Ship Passenger Files," Polish Genealogical Society of America Bulletin, Chicago, IL, Vol. 5, No. 3, Summer 1997, p. 7. E184.P7P6856a. Mentions an incomplete list of "Jüdische Auswanderer" (Jewish emigrants) listed on microfilm 1568871, held by the Genealogical Society of Utah (Mormons) and cites an article on the Internet by John Movius with David Dreyer, "Namenskartei aus den 'Bremer Schiffslisten' (Bremen Ship Passengers 1904-1914)," ©1996. Both Tye and Movius err in indicating that only microfilm 1568852 holds records that are specifically Jewish. A check of the original Mormon index record shows that Microfilm 1568852 lists Jewish emigrants from 1 November 1913 -18 April 1914. However Microfilm 1568871 lists Jewish emigrants from 18 April to 30 May, from 20-22 August, 23 October, 6 November, and 29-31 December 1914. Furthermore, Microfilm 1568602, item 3, lists Bremen emigrants for 1904-1914 from Posen ending with the name "Broeker" while Microfilm 1568603 begins with that name and continues to the end of Posen emigrants for the period. It should be noted that the lists are extracts and are very incomplete, even for the period covered. The information listed next to each name is the marital status, occupation, passenger number, ship name, place of last residence, and destination. Many cards are out of sequence. Index cards exist for the Jewish emigrants. Microfilm 1568871 lists emigrants destined for the U. S. A. from Bremen from 1907-1908 while Microfilm 1568875, item 1, lists emigrants destined for the U. S. A. from Bremen for 1907-1908 and for 1913-1914. The films are high reduction (42x).

Jewish Relations with Poles and Germans

The Biblioteka Uniwersytecka im. Adama Mickiewicza in Poznań possesses an exceptional collection of Masonic books amounting to about 80,000 volumes. Generally, the Jews could not join Masonic lodges in Posen but some did join in other countries. However, in the last years of the German Empire the situation relaxed a bit. Blanke, Richard, "Bismarck and the Prussian Polish Policies of 1886," JMH, Vol. 45, No. 2, June 1973, pp. 211-239. The expulsion orders of the 1880s aimed at Jews more than Poles with at least 30 percent being Jewish. The urban, petty-bourgeois interests resented the alien and Jewish competition, supported by local and provincial administrators in the Prussian east because they saw the policy as ridding them of politically active, left-leaning Jewish traders and artisans, p. 216. The Progressive Party saw the expulsion orders as aimed at an important part of their constituency, the Jews, p. 217. The party leaders were convinced that left-liberal Jews were a major target of the measures which expelled hundreds of German-speaking Jews, p. 218. Bismarck changed the campaign a bit prior to 1886 to cut back on the expulsions of Jews, among others, p. 220. There was a particularly rapid outmigration of Jews from Poznania, which fell by 50 percent between 1849 and 1885, citing Wegener, Leo, Der wirtschaftliche Kampf der Deutschen mit den Polen um die Provinz Posen, Poznań, 1903, appendix, table 5, q. v., infra, this heading, p. 222, n. 30.

The Jews, living in towns, where the Germans also lived, were more visible to the German than the Poles were and competed with them in similar professions. As a matter of Prussian policy Jews were expelled from rural trades and so applied for placement as farmers and for promised aid and loans. A group of 42 such families applied with the Posen chamber [government office] in 1802, when the plans for their relocation became publicly known, p. 39 and fn. 87, citing Archiwum Głowny Akt Dawnych, Warsaw, Südpreußen I 892, pp. 90-97, also on p. 39. Using Prussian policy following the orders requiring Jewish merchants to live in cities, Christians saw an opportunity to rid themselves of Jewish competition. "Especially in Poznań, where Christian and Jewish merchants worked alongside each other, the Christians tried to inhibit the trade of the Jews and confine them to the narrow space of the ghetto—which had never existed in Poznań as a formal entity—by referring to Christian privileges dating from Polish rule (citing Archiwum Państwowe w Poznaniu, Konfraternia Kupców no. 61*f.*). Such anti-Jewish measures on the part of the urban bourgeoisie would have made Jews a corporate class within an urban society." In litigation on this issue, in this case "the Prussian bureaucracy actually insisted on protecting the individual rights of Jews [which the author contends was a rare exception], p. 45.

The author states that there were dense Jewish populations in this part of Germany, and many towns excluded their large Jewish populations from certain sections of town, often the central market square, p. 31. In n. 2, pp. 31-32, the author lists the following information from Heppner/Herzberg, q. v., under POSEN PROVINCE AND VICINITY, giving the page numbers in the 1909 edition where the information occurs: In 1793 in Bojanowo Jews could by houses in all parts of town but only with the permission of the lord of the town and of the city government. The Judengasse in Jarotschin bordered the marketplace. In Kempen some Jews were allowed to buy or build houses on the marketplace. In Kobylin Jews could trade in the marketplace but could not buy houses bordering it. In Ostrowo and Pinne, Jews were prohibited from living around the marketplace. Fires destroyed the Jewish quarters of Lissa and Meseritz. The Judenstraße in Murowana-Goslin was later renamed Rogasener Straße; and in Nakel it was renamed Posenerstraße. In Schneidemühl Jews had to leave a distance of 15 Ruten on the south side of Kirchstraße to separate Jews from Christians and had to dig a moat. Other titles in the same book discuss aspects of Jewish innkeepers and landowners and teaching jobs for Jewish women in Posen Province but give no names or locations.

In 1848 approximately 78,500 Jews lived in Posen Province, constituting almost 6% of the population of the province (6% in the district of Poznań; 5.5% in the district of Bydgoszcz), living mainly in urban areas where, in many cases, they constituted 30-50% of the population, citing von Bergmann, pp. 242-247, q. v., supra, at p. 69. Discusses the political position of the Jews as a result of the political developments of the period. Generally reviews the literature on the subject in extensive footnotes.

—, "Poles, Germans and Jews in the Grand Duchy of Posen in 1848: From Coexistence to Conflict," EEQ, Vol. 33, No. 3, September 1999, pp. 385-394, including notes, pp. 393-394. In 1848, 6% of the population of Posen was Jewish, as stated by von Bergmann (see heading Jewish Relations with Poles and Germans), p. 385. The wealthiest portion of Jewish society was merely 10% of the total Jewish population; many Jews existed on the edge of poverty, p. 386, and p. 393, n. 4. Jewish situation in Poznań in 1848 discussed, pp. 387-388, noting that 20% of the Jewish population received almost the same status as Christians in 1847. From 1833 very wealthy Jews could be naturalized; they had to forsake traditional dress and use German in public, but they did not have full equality, despite many privileges, p. 387. In 1845 the Posen Provincial Diet passed resolutions in opposition to complete Jewish emancipation and many city councils refused to grant them full urban rights, but most Jews were loyal subjects of the Prussian king, pp. 387-388 and p. 394, n. 7. The year 1848 did not produce much conflict between Jews and Poles; a 22 March 1848 proclamation by the Polish national Committee guaranteed the rights of Jews, p. 388, and a number of Jews joined local national committees, p. 388 and p. 394, n. 8. However, on 22 March 1848 the National Committee refused to take Jews into its own ranks. The next day the German Committee was formed and opened its ranks to the Jews, p. 389. Many publications say that Jews decisively supported the German side and resisted Polish national goals, but this was actually so only in Poznań and in counties with German majorities, and most supporters were prosperous Jews. The Jews in some locations played the leading role in organizing the German national movement. Mostly doctors among the progressive Jewish intelligentsia supported the Poles, p. 391; while the Jews mostly supported the Germans, the poor Jews supported neither side, p. 391, and p. 394, n. 10. Historically, before 1848 many Jews in Posen supported identified with German culture, p. 391. The year 1848 brought Jews full civic equality and began their political awakening, p. 392. It also initiated the process of the Jews' "confessionalisation" [not explained], p. 392 and p. 394, n. 11. The Poles did not do much to win Jews over to their side, p. 392. The Poles distrusted the Jews, which brought the latter closer to the Germans, who were unusually open to them at this time. The 1848 Spring of Nations began the rising anti-Semitism in Poznań, growing economic competition with the Germans, and the exodus of Jews from Poznań in large numbers between 1848 and World War I, p. 393. A German version , ocvering some but not all of the same issues, appeared as "Das Großherzogtum Posen im Revolutionsjahr 1848," pp. 149-172, in Jaworski, Rudolf, and Luft, Robert, eds., *1848/49—Revolutionen in Ostmitteleuropa: Vorträge der Tagung des Collegium Carolinum in Bad Wiessee vom 30. Filled with assumptions, misinformation, and prejudice about Jews, in 1873 he told Prof. Jakob Caro of Breslau that he thought that the essay was "literary chaff" although in 1832 he was proud of it. With respect to Jews the essay provides insight into the thinking of upper-class conservative intellectuals at the time when emancipation of the Jews was under consideration for Posen Province. Each list details the surname (and maiden name, where relevant), first name, date and place of birth, last address, date of death, when known. After Lithuania, the same pattern repeats for Latvia, and then Czechoslovakian deportations from Theresienstadt, with each country having an introductory chapter to explain the circumstances and events in German and in English. Vol. II follows the same pattern, with a discussion of various cities from which German deportations to the Baltic states occurred, followed by the actual lists, and then provides the same information for Estonia. Some Jews born in Posen Province are listed among the German deportees.

There was a survey of goods, services, and conditions in the 3 chambers, Poznań, Kalisz, and Warsaw to find out what the Prussians had annexed in each town as a result of the Second Partition of 1793. The questionnaire covers answers from 1793-1794. The 82 questions posed are listed on pp. 1-8. The responses are from each town administration, arranged by chamber and within each chamber by town, alphabetically. Posen and Kalisch are represented on pp. 11-888. The responses provide a large amount of information on each town, including the name of the owner of the town in item 5, or crown ownership, or indicating that plots were owned individually . A significant part of the information is financial with respect to each town, but the Jewish population is often provided in answer 30, as is the number of Jewish professionals, such as butchers, furriers, etc., in answer 33. Few Jewish names, but one exception is for Kobyla Góra, Vol. 2, pp. 674-677, indicating at p. 676 that the Jew Samuel Wolff was an arrenda (a kind of renter) of a potash manufacturing facility there.

Some objects were borrowed from family members. The exhibit included books, some autographed by Eger; his last will, promulgated by a Posen court on 24 March 1837; and other objects, including a silver cup that he gave to his grandson, Hirsch David Eger. The exhibit consisted of over 80 objects, pp. 187-188.

Jewish Life in Posen between the First Partition and World War I

Kaplan, Marion A., ed., Jewish Daily Life in Germany, 1618-1945, Oxford; New York: Oxford University Press, 2005, 529 pp., including notes, pp. 387-475, bibliographical references, pp. 477-505, and index, pp. 507-529. DS135.G32J49 2004. German version: Kaplan, Marion, ed., Geschichte des jüdischen Alltags in Deutschland: vom 17. Jahrhundert bis 1945, München: Beck, 2003, 638 pp. At German Historical Institute, Washington, DC, DS 135 .G3 2003. The book is replete with references to the nature of Jewish life in Posen to 1918. See Lowenstein, Steven, "The Beginnings of Integration, 1780-1870," pp. 93-172; Kaplan, Marion A., "As Germans and as Jews in Imperial Germany," pp. 173-270. 28 towns in Posen in 1817 with total populations of over 4,000 had over 500 Jewish inhabitants, p. 96. Posen had over 1,000 Jewish inhabitants, p. 97. Many Jewish shtetls had areas where Jews were not permitted to live, and some towns excluded Jews from living around the marketplace while others permitted it, p. 98 and n. 8, p. 400. Jews in the eastern provinces of the Empire lived in concentrated settlements, similar to those in eastern European shtetls. In 1817 18 towns in Posen and West Prussia with populations under 4,000 had over 500 Jewish inhabitants, pp. 95-96. The Jews mostly lived in wooden buildings, just as their neighbors did and were thus exposed to frequent fires, p. 99 and nn. 23 and 24, p. 400, citing Adam, Zeit zur Abreise, p. 17. Before 1812 the Jews of Posen and Bavaria numbered over 100,000, or well over one-third of all German Jews. In 1849 Posen Jews numbered 77,014, compared with 52,566 in 1815. However, between 1850 and 1871 Posen Jews fell to 61,982. By 1871 only 22% of German Jews lived in Posen and Bavaria combined. Emigration was mostly from these poorer areas, where residential restrictions lasted longer, and overseas emigration was an important cause of the decline of the Jewish population in Posen, p. 101. The newlywed Makowers of Santomischel started in a single room in her parents' house. Living conditions for the Seligsohns before 1840 in Samotschin and of the Hermann Hamburger residence in 1830 in Schmiegel described, p. 102. Hermann Makower's father [possibly Jacob Macower, per Luft, Naturalized Jews ..., p. 61] asked her family about his son's future bride, p. 112. In 1871 Jews were 3.9% of the population but only 2.5% of the illiterates. However, the percentage of Jewish illiterate women was higher than the percentage of Christian illiterate women, p. 119. Itzig Hamburger of Schmiegel [See Luft, p. 33] studied privately in addition to publicly, in order to further improve himself; he and his neighbor studied together every morning, p. 120. In 1825 the government of Posen (City) required 19 male Jewish schoolmasters and 6 female school directors of hadarim schools in the city of Posen to take a state examination and closed those 19 schools whose directors did not take the test. In 1826 the government allowed 6 heder teachers to keep their schools open while they pursued education, while the police moved against the remaining hadarim. In 1829-1830, when 5 government-approved Jewish elementary schools opened, the teachers of the older form were given 3 months to close down. Most of the 33 Jewish elementary schools in Posen whose opening dates are known opened between 1831 and 1837. By 1848 there were over 9,000 Jewish children in school, two-thirds of all Jewish children of elementary school age. The sizes of Jewish schools in Fordon, Krotoschin, Lissa, Ostrowo, and Schneidemühl discussed, based upon Heppner/Herzberg, Aus Vergangenheit und Gegenwart ... [q. v. under POSEN PROVINCE AND VICINITY], p. 122 and p. 406, n. 30, citing Herzberg/Heppner, pp. 826-828. Jews, such as in Inowrazlaw, paid more than Christians to attend school, which was subsidized for Christians. Some towns with a large Jewish population, especially in Posen Province, organized public schools as Simultanschule (non-denominational schools) and gave consideration to the Jewish minority as a way of making them allies with the Germans and the Poles. In Fordon, a one-class Simultanschule, set up in 1814, later expanded to 3 classes. In Pleschen there was a 6-class Simultanschule with 138 Jewish students in 1830. It eventually was called the Deutsche Schule, p. 124, and p. 406, n. 143, citing Herzberg/Heppner. Unlike Christian denominational schools, the Simultanschule sometimes employed Jewish teachers. Before the 1830s, Jewish teachers in northern Germany were almost all from "Poland," including Posen Province, but in southern Germany, they were the exception. Teachers had low social status and low salaries, sometimes serving as slaughterer, cantor, rabbi, synagogue caretaker, and gravedigger for as little as 8 Taler per semester, plus fees and tuition. Their wives remained behind in "Poland." One teacher saw his wife and children in Samter only once in 12 years, p. 124 and p. 406, n. 49, citing Heymann, Aron Hirsch, Loewe, Heinrich, ed., A. H. Heymann Lebenserinnerungen, Nach ein Niederschrift im Auftrage seiner Kinder, Berlin: Eigentum der Familie (Für den Buchhandel durch M. Poppelauers Buchhandlung), 1909, 476 pp., including frontispiece portraits of Heymann and his wife, and bibliography, pp. 457-476, but no index. DS135.G5H484, and at Leo Baeck Institute, DS135.G5H48. Aron Hirsch Heymann, born 1803, died 1880, and his wife, Johanna, was born 1808 and died 1880, both born in West Prussia, with relevant references to Posen at pp. 61, 63-65, and 84-85. Exceptions to passing state examinations for some Posen Province teachers were abolished in 1825, p. 125 and p. 407, n. 50. There were 172 male Jewish students at the Posen Realschule in 1852-1853, almost exactly half of the total enrollment. In girls' schools the percentage was even higher until the government set a 15% quota in 1851; it was not lifted until 1872. At the Luisenschule in Posen Jewish female enrollment was 27 (11%) in 1846 and 107 (49%) in 1850. The next year when the Jewish female enrollment was 111, the government reintroduced the old 15% quota, which was only dropped in 1872, p. 126 and p. 407, n. 44. The Posen dialect of Yiddish resembled eastern European Yiddish, p. 127. Advanced Talmudic education still took place in the third quarter of the 19th century in a few Posen study houses, p. 129. Unlike locations further west, up to one-third of the Jewish population in Posen was engaged in handicrafts. In Südpreußen in 1797 923 of the 1,599 tailors were Jews, as were 251 of 731 furriers, 638 of 1,245 bakers, 238 of 289 butchers, and 51 of 75 capmakers. In some towns Jewish craftsmen outnumbered Jewish merchants, and the largest Jewish crafts, especially tailors, organized guilds, p. 131 and p. 407, nn. 7 and 8. Many Jews purchased feudal milling and liquor monopolies or served as managers on large noble estates, p. 131. The Hamburger textile firm in Schmiegel traded at markets up to 70-80 km. away. Hermann Hamburger described a room in Schmiegel, p. 133. Wives sometimes were the wage earners in Posen, mainly in rabbinical families so that the husbands could study full-time, p. 137. In Posen tailors, shoemakers, and weavers declined from over 4,000 in 1843 to under 3,000 in 1861, p. 139, with further details at n. 71, p. 409. Isaac Bernstein of Schildberg began as a tutor and made a "good marriage" so he was able to open a material, tobacco, and grain business and have a small two-room house. In 1847 he made a fortune speculating in grain and then lost it speculating in grain and wool. He went to America in 1852, leaving his wife behind. He established a business in Massachusetts and returned to Germany in 1858, p. 143 and p. 410, n. 98, taken from the Bernstein memoir in the Leo Baeck Institute, New York City, pp. 4-15. In Posen Province the Jewish communities were structured more like those in Eastern Europe than in the rest of Germany. Almost every Posen community had a Talmudically-trained rabbi with considerable influence over the community, at least until the middle of the 19th century.

Often the community had more than one synagogue. Craftsmen's guilds (hevrot) had their own synagogues. There were tailor's synagogues in at least 13 Jewish communities, citing Heppner/Herzberg, p. 146 and p. 411, n. 2. Most large Posen Jewish communities had a Beth Hamidrash (House of Study), some of which existed until the end of the 19th century, p. 146 and p. 411, n. 13, citing Kemlein, Posener Juden, as there being 34 Jewish communities with a Beth Hamidrash. In 1857 the city of Posen had 6 communal synagogues, 6 private prayer houses, and a Reform temple. The synagogue in Fordon, built in 1832, had seats for 500 men and 250 women while the one in Inowrazlaw had 450 seats, p. 148, citing Heppner/Herzberg. Legends in Fordon and in Posen told of rabbis who stopped fires by miraculous actions, p. 151. Some enlightened Jews, led by David Caro, 1782-1839, founded a reading society in 1812, whose members read the German classics and even Voltaire and Rousseau. They unsuccessfully tried to set up a modern Jewish school and led the opposition to the community rabbi, the leading Talmudic scholar, Akiba Eger, p. 152. In early 19th century Samotschin women wore wigs instead of bonnets and in one instance were mocked by boys who tied a wig to a dog's tail and chased it down the street. After 1848 natural hair was seen, p. 154. When Jacob Adam went to Berlin, his cousin gave him advice on proper dress, p. 160, and p. 414, n. 7. In the 1820s and 1830s many large Jewish communities set up young men's societies for social and charitable functions, p. 163 and p. 414, n. 27. Anti-Jewish riots in Posen Province were motivated by traditional anti-Jewish accusations of ritual murder or Jewish mockery of the Christian religion. In 1848 Poles attacked Jews because they considered Jews to be German allies. The riots were very violent with several Jews killed, some with great brutality. Rioters burned down synagogues and tore up Torah scrolls. Other Jews who were Polish supporters denied that the riots were particularly brutal, p. 165 and n. 43, p. 415, with several citations. Jewish criminality was discernible in the 1820s and 1830s in Betsche, where one quarter of the inhabitants were said to live by theft or receiving stolen property. In 1832 the police surrounded the town, whose city council included the worst criminals, and arrested the thieves. Other Posen towns which authorities considered to be headquarters of thieves included Brätz, Bentschen, Blesen, Tirschtiegel, Schwerin an der Warthe, Unruhstadt, and Wollstein, p. 166 and p. 415, n. 46. In Schmiegel large numbers of Jews and Christians gathered at an inn on Saturday and Sunday mornings for a drink. Vehement arguments about politics occurred but rarely religion. Jewish and Christian women met in the town for coffee and in social circles (Kränzchen), and there was also a common citizen's club, p. 167 and p. 416, n. 58. A law in 1834, when the German minority sought the support of a large Jewish population against the Polish majority, permitted Jews to be elected to local government bodies, but in 1838 an order limited Jews to no more than one-third of membership on any town council, p. 169. For when Jews first joined town councils in the 1830s to 1850s in any given location, see p. 416, n. 75. Jewish village schools were more numerous in Posen than elsewhere in the Empire, with 50 schools in Posen in 1905, p. 207 and p. 425, n. 65, citing AZJ, 16 June 1905, pp. 277-278. Generally, the trend was urbanization and diminishing religious practice, but a few children became more Orthodox than their parents, p. 245 and p. 436, n. 98. In the 20th century Jews in Posen city avidly subscribed to the theater and chatted with relatives and other Jews during intermission, p. 254 and p. 438, n. 19. In Posen in the 1880s Adolph Asch described 8 steps on the Jewish social ladder, noting that the boundaries were somewhat looser than in his grandmother's time, p. 254 and p. 438, n. 26. Discussion of the degree of ghettoization in various towns, p.

400, n. 8. Boys and girls studied together in Reb Meier's heder in Samotschin in the 1830s, p. 405, n. 2. [He was probably Meyer Marcus Lewy, Luft, p. 56.] Mikvahs fell in use by 1900. Jutroschin had a half-built mikvah in 1892, p. 435, n. 88. There was a women's Zionist organization in Posen before World War I, p. 439, n. 49.

The Main Arcvhies of Old Records in Warsaw holds a collection of records from the period of South Prussian times. The 17 April 1797 General Decree on the Jews [of Prussia] required Jewish families to educate their children, both obys and girls equally, in denominational schools. The langauge of instruction was to be German using German textbooks but with some instruction in Polish. Teachers wree to be paid by the state, p. 153. Jewish parents feared that non-denominational schools would be used to convert their children, and hatred between reltigious groups would make an educational setting impossible. The project remained only on paper, however, with some attempts to introduce a few non-deniominational schools but these did not survive the creation of the Duchy of Warsaw, which permitted only denominational schools., p. 154.

Schäfer, Harald, "Juden der Provinz Posen—Reminiszenzen an eine untergegagene Welt," [Part I] JWW, Vol. 55, 2009, pp. 139-147. A brief summary of the history of the Jews of Posen Province, pp. 139-140. Birnbaum/Międzychód can be viewed as the cradle of German department stores. The families Tietz, Ury, and Knopf, all creators of major department stores, came from Birnbaum, and the families Schocken and Wronke came from the neighboring town of Margonin and Kähme/Kamionna, p. 140. Oscar Tietz, 1858-1923, on 1 March 1882, opened his first business in the Thuringian town of Gera, using capital borrowed from his uncle, Hermann Tietz, 1837-1907. In Berlin in 1896 the latter opened the "Wertheim Department Store" on Leipziger Platz. It was the largest such establishment in Europe at that time. Hermann Tietz began with a central department store in Leipzig in 1905 followed by the Tietz House on Alexanderplatz in Berlin. While Hermann Tietz and Oscar concentrated on the south and east of the German Empire, Leonhard Tietz, 1849-1914, dominated the western region of Germany and Belgium. At the age of 14 Hermann Wronke, born 1867, died 1942, learned his trade in the manufactured goods business of H. + C. Tietz in Prenzlau (administrative district of Potsdam), where he acquired basic commercial skills. At age 20 in 1887 he opened H. Wronker, his first company, in Mannheim. Salman Schocken, 1877-1959, first worked at his brother Simon's store in Zwickau, but in 1904 he opened his own department store in Oelsnitz, Vogtland, Saxony. In 1931 he founded the Schocken Verlag, devoting himself after 1933, especially to Jewish literature. From 1933 to 1940, while living in Jerusalem, he promoted two literary institutions, p. 141. Ignaz Zadek, born Posen 1858, died Berlin 1931, was a member of Berlin City Council and was actively involved in that city's founding of the general health fund. Hermann Zondek, specialist in renal and metabolic diseases, born Wronke 1887, died Jerusalem 1979, treated many famous German government officials in the Weimar period. Another famous physician was Bernhard Zondek, born Wronke 1891, died New York 1966. He specialized in gynecology. Samuel Georg Zondek, brother of Hermann and Bernhard and born Wronke 1894, died Tel Aviv 1970, was the first to recognize the importance of potassium for cell growth. Elias Auerbach, born Ritschenwalde 1882, founded the first Jewish hospital in Haifa, inspiring Arthur Ruppin, 1876-1943, to purchase residential land in 1910, thus beginning the development of Greater Haifa. Simon Baruch, born Schwersenz 1840, died 1921, was a member of the South Carolina State Board of Health and after 1881 studied malaria in New York City. Ismar Boas, born Exin 1858, died Vienna 1938, was largely responsible for the emergence of the field of gastroenterology (stomach and intestinal diseases). p. 142. Gustav Jacob Born, born Kempen 1851, died 1900, was a histologist known in the medical community for his methods of manufacture of plastic anatomical and embryological models. Max Gerson, born Wongrowitz 1881, was a internal and nervous diseases specialist in Bielefeld from 1920. For 20 years in New York, where he emigrated in 1933, he successfully treated cancer patients who were regarded as no longer treatable. Richard Kandt, born Posen 1867, died Nuremberg 1918, was dissatisfied with his medical training and his activities as a physician. He was an African explorer, studying German East Africa from 1897 to 1902, In 1907 he was appointed "Resident of the Imperial Government of German East Africa" with the mission of providing access to the Rwandan highlands and incorporating it into the administration of German East Africa. Kandt founded the later capital of Rwanda, Kiguli [sic, Kigali] in 1908. Raphael Kosch, born Lissa 1803, died Berlin 1872, entered politics because, as a Jew, he was not allowed to treat Prussian soldiers by the Prussian king. In 1848 he was elected deputy for Königsberg in the Prussian National Assembly. He was a member of National Assembly until his death and was elected its Vice President. Herbert Lewin, born Schwarzenau, Kr Witkowo, 1899, a physician, was chosen President of the National Association of the Jewish Communities in Hesse in 1955 and Chairman of the Executive Board of the Central Council of Jews in Germany in 1963. As chief physician of the Jewish Hospital in Cologne the Nazis had deported him on 22 October 1941, to the Łódź ghetto, from which he was transferred in August 1944 to the Auschwitz concentration camp. After his release in 1945, he immediately returned to Cologne, where he organized, p. 143, the return of survivors from Theresienstadt going to Cologne. From 1949 to 1967 Herbert Levin served as chief physician at the Offenbacher Women's Clinic. Albert Moll, born Lissa 1862, made his life's work the adoption of medical science-based psychotherapy. His book, Ärztliche Ethik, Berlin, 1902, was one of the most important of his many publications. In 1945 he assessed the defendants with respect to the charges levied at the Nuremberg trials. [Not possible since he died in Berlin on 23 September 1939.] Julius Moses, born Posen 1868, son of a merchant, was a physician by 1912. From 1922 to 1933, he was a member of the Reichstag. After his 1847 habilitation dissertation, Robert Remak, born in Posen, became the first Jewish scientist at the Medical Faculty of Berlin University. Despite the scientific reputation which he enjoyed as a physician, he was denied a full professorship. In the 1848 Revolution, Remak favored the Polish cause. Ferdinand Straßmann, born Rawitsch 1838, died Berlin 1931, in view of his services to the local community of Berlin in 1915 was awarded honorary citizenship of the capital. He was a Berlin city councillor. Posen history is inextricably linked with Adolf Warschauer, born Kempen 1855, died Berlin 1930, an archivist at the State Archives there, p. 144. In 1885 he was a co-founder of the Historical Society for the Province of Posen, and was the editor of its magazine. During the First World War, when German troops captured Warsaw in 1915, he went to Warsaw to protect the archives. Markus Brann, born Rawitsch 1849, died Breslau 1920,.was appointed in 1891 to teach at the Jewish Theological Seminary in Breslau. From 1899 he edited the Monatsschrift für Geschichte und Wissenschaft des Judentums. Mention of Heinrich Graetz, 1817-1891. Bernhard Brilling, born Tremessen 1906, died Münster 1987 was an historian of Posen Province and director of the Archives of the Breslau Synagogue Community from 1938. From November 1938 until early 1939, Brilling was imprisoned in Buchenwald concentration camp. In March 1939 he managed to emigrate to Palestine. It was not until 1946 that he found a permanent position with the City of Tel Aviv as an archivist. He moved to Münster in 1957. After writing his Ph.D. dissertation, he worked from 1958 at the Institutum Judaicum Delitzschianum, where he established the Department of the History of Jews in Germany. Jacob Caro, born Gnesen 1835, died Berlin 1904, was an historian who specialized in the study of Poland and Russia. Initially he was a teacher but for four years, he was the scientific guide to the Russian Grand Duchess Helene Pavlova, the sister-in-law of Tsar Nicholas I, 1796-1855 [She was born c. 1800 and was Princess of Württemberg, dying in St. Petersburg, 21 January 1873.], p. 145. From 1876 he was a professor at the University of Breslau. Ismar Elbogen, born Schildberg 1874, died New York, 1943, specialized in Jewish historiography. In 1902 he became Rector of the Lehranstalt für die Wissenschaft des Judentums, holding the position until 1938. In Summer 1938 Elbogen emigrated via Switzerland and Palestine to the United States. Aron Freimann, born Filehne 1871, died New York 1948, was the director of the Hebraica and Judaica Collection of the City Library of Frankfurt am Main The collection survived several attempts by the Nazis to appropriate it with few losses and was continued after 1945. In 1938 Freimann emigrated to the United States and worked in New York as a lecturer for Jewish history and literature. [No mention that he was head of the Jewish Division at the New York Public Library.] Bruno Gebhardt, born Krotoschin 1858, died Berlin 1905, began his career as a schoolteacher. In collaboration with eleven other authors for the first time in 1892, he produced the Handbuch der deutschen Geschichte, popularly called the "Gebhardt," a handbook for historical study in schools. Eventually, it was used in universities. Heinrich (Hirsch) Graetz, born Xions 1817, died 1891. He was the first historian of the Jews in modern times and from the Province of Posen. He taught at the Fraenkel Foundation of the Jewish Theological Seminary in Breslau from 1854. Aron Heppner, born Pleschen 1865, died Breslau 1938, has documented the Jewish share of the regional history of Posen Province. He, together with Isaac Herzberg, 1857-1918, wrote the basic work of Jewish historiography of the German East, documenting the Jewish communities in Posen, p. 146. Photograph of Heinrich (Hirsch) Graetz. Jacob Jacobsen, born Schrimm 1888, died 1968, was head of the Gesamtarchiv der

Deutschen Juden after 1920, succeeding Eugene Täubler, 1879-1953. Jacobsen became an expert on the history of the Jews in Prussia. As a result of the November 1938 pogrom, he applied to emigrate from Germany, but only his wife and his son were allowed to go. The Nazis viewed him as indispensable to obtaining information as to who was an "Aryan." In May 1943 he was deported to Theresienstadt but survived. Philip Jaffé, 1819-1870, was the first Jew in Prussia to be appointed in Berlin in 1862 as associate professor for auxiliary historical sciences. His editions of the Monumenta Germaniae Historica were characterized by an excellent design and count as the highest achievement of philological-historical criticism. Although he converted to Christianity in 1868, he failed to gain a higher position in the academic field. Disappointed, he committed suicide in 1870. Eugene Täubler, born Gostyn 1879, in 1906 was a co-founder and Director General of the Archives of German Jews. In 1912 he became Chairman of the Jewish History Department at the Hochschule für die Wissenschaft des Judentums. He gained a reputation as Ordinary Professor for Ancient History at Heidelberg University from 1925. Shortly after Hitler seized power, he gave up his professorship in protest against the anti-Semitic policies. He returned to the Hochschule für die Wissenschaft des Judentums in Berlin and lived there until his emigration in 1941, p. 147. [Albert Moll is better known today as one of the founders of sexology, and in that role, as Magnus Hirschfeld's nemesis. He was also an early scientific researcher in the field of hypnosis.]

—, [Part II], JWW, Vol. 56, 2010, pp. 143-150. The painter and graphic artist Lesser Ury, born 7 November 1861, died 18 October 1931 in Berlin, was born in Birnbaum/Międzychod. The father died early, leaving the family in financial difficulties. After studying art in various cities in Europe, he returned to Berlin in 1887 and began exhibiting, with portrait of Ury, p. 143. Siegfried Laboschin, born Gnesen 23 May 1868, died 1929, studied art in Berlin and other German cities. He was a portrait painter. Isidor Aschheim was born in Margonin in 1891 and after a stint as a salesman, studied painting from 1919 to 1923 in Breslau. In 1939 he immigrated to Palestine. He died in 1968. Max Rabes, born Samter/Szamotuły 1868, died Vienna 1944, was a decorative artist. Albert Reimann , born Gnesen 9 November 1874, taught art in the Reimann-Schule and was an arbiter of style. When the Nazis seized power, he emigrated to Great Britain, where he opened an art school, p. 144. In 1938 he was at the opening of the British and Irish Pavilion at the Chicago World's Fair. Herbert Sandberg, with photograph, was born in Posen 18 April 1908 and died in the German Democratic Republic 18 September 1991. He was a graphic artist and caricaturist. He worked at various magazines in the German Democratic Republic. Jakob Steinhardt, born Zerkow/Żerków, Kreis Jarotschin 23 May 1887, died Nahariah, Israel 11 February 1968, was an honorary citizen of Jerusalem. His artwork portrayed the life of eastern European Jews. In 1933, with the Nazi takeover of Germany, he emigrated to Palestine, where he was the director of the Graphics Division of the New Bezalel Art School until his retirement in 1953. Bruno Asch was born in Wollstein/Wolsztyn, Kreis Bomst, on 23 July 1890 and died in Amsterdam on 15 May 1940. From 1922 to 1925 he was mayor of the community of Höchst, Hess, Germany, p. 145, and was forced out of office by the French in 1923. He was financial director of the city of Berlin from 1931 and as a Jew and socialist left Germany for Holland in 1933. With the invasion of Holland by Nazi troops, he committed suicide. The electrical engineer Herbert Baum, born Moschin/Mosina, Kreis Schrimm 10 February 1912, died Berlin 11 June 1942, was the Communist leader of an uprising against the Nazis until the end of 1941. After the sabotage of a propaganda show in the Berlin Lustgarten, Baum was arrested, and on 6 June 1942, the Gestapo announced his suicide; portrait on page. Julian Borchardt, born Bromberg 13 January 1868, died Berlin 16 February 1932, was a political education theorist for the Social Democratic Party from 1907 to 1913 and a member of the Prussian state parliament from 1911 to 1913. From 1913 he was the editor of the magazine Lichtstrahlen, p. 146. In 1914 Borchardt left the Social Democratic Party for a more left-oriented party, opposed to war. He moved to Moscow and in 1931 worked at the Marx-Engels Institute. Stephan Born, born Lissa 18 December 1824, died Basel, Switzerland, 4 May 1898, was a leader of the German workers movement. He was a Communist leader and agitator in southern France and in Switzerland, returning from there to Berlin in Germany in 1848 at the outbreak of the Revolution. After the Dresden Uprising of 1849 he had to flee to Switzerland, where he was Professor of German and French Literature at the University of Basel. Heinz Brandt, born Posen 16 August 1909, died Frankfurt am Main 8 January 1986, the son of liberal pacifists, had a spectacular political career. He was interned in various concentration camps from 1934 until 1945. After the war he worked for the East German SED Party until the 17 June 1953 Uprising, with which he sympathized. He was imprisoned and fled to the West in 1958, working as an editor for the firm IG Metall. On 16 June 1961, while attending a congress in West Berlin, he was kidnaped and taken to East Berlin, where he was charged with espionage and sentenced to 13 years in prison, but due to numerous international protests was released in 1964, p. 147. Bernhard Breslauer, born Posen 1851, died [Berlin 11 February] 1928, worked for the "Verband deutschen Juden" and founder the "Verein der Posener," and from 1908 until 1917 was the chairman of the "Vereinigung für das liberales Judentum in Deutschland," which he founded, pp. 147-148. Georg Robert Davidsohn, born Gnesen 20 August 1872, died Berlin 15 July 1942, worked against alcoholism among workers, editing a journal. He was in the Reichstag from 1912 to 1920, working against alcoholism. After World War I, he was a founder of a society against war. Wilhelm Salomon Freund, born Schmiegel/Śmigiel 1831, died [? was below that of the Christians in Posen, p. 115. Anti-Jewish entrepreneur attitudes in Rogasen discussed; there was a fear of Posen Jews in adjacent areas, p. 115, n. 15. By 1846, c. 14,500 of the 79,800 Posen Jews were wealthy enough for naturalization under the 1833 law despite emigration losses in population, p. 116. The government wanted to turn the Posen Jewish lower middle class population into "good Prussians"despite prejudice against them, p. 117. Innkeeping licenses went from 320 in 1832 to 726 in 1840; the mass of Posen Jews were petty traders, innkeepers, and were, unlike in other Prussian provinces, craftsmen. The 1833 law opened craft guilds to Jews while prohibiting their employment of Christian apprentices and journeymen. The Jews were conscripted to obtain skilled craftsmen for the Posen Army Corps. Within 30 years the Jews in Posen oriented westward and the upper economic classes embraced Reform Judaism, p. 118. The archive formerly in Merseburg lists Jewish innkeepers for 1845 by name, reputation, and personal data. See Rep. 77, XXX, Gen, 117, Beiheft II, and Rep. 76, III, 1 XIIIa, 1c, p. 118, n. 18. The Posen Jews did not speak Judeo-German; Posen officials concerned themselves, inter alia, with such things as how to address a naturalized Jew in official documents and which first names were Christian and therefore forbidden to Jews, as well as the language to be used for commercial ledgers and legal contracts, p. 122. Courts in Posen said that they were unable to prosecute crimes unless Jewish disabilities as witnesses were removed, p. 124. By 1818 the Posen Oberpräsident von Zerboni, the Minister von Flottwell, and von Brenn had agreed with the Landstände that the military draft was desirable for Prussian Jews, p. 125. In the early 1840s the Jews opposed exemption from military service and on 31 December 1845 all Jews in Prussia were given the privilege of being drafted into the Prussian army, p. 126. The Jewish exemption from military service caused a lack of craftsmen in Bromberg for the military, p. 126, n. 32. There was a great deal of anti-Semitism in Posen, p. 130. In 1845 the Provinzial Landtag favored liberalization of the law of 1833, universal military service, and full freedom of movement for Jews in all Prussia; the Jews serving on various Posen city councils were limited by an 1840 Cabinetsordre to 1/3-1/4 of each city council, independent of actual voting strength, p. 131. Prussian officials tried to suppress hadarim (Winkelschulen=small adventure schools or hedge schools) in Posen through compulsory school attendance laws; the Posen government complained that the law of 1833 had destroyed the position of the traditional community leaders of the Jews without providing a substitute, p. 134. The Jews of Posen were greatly affected by the process of acculturation and were "de-nationalized," dissolving the closely knit cultural community, p. 136. The Jews of Posen constituted 40% of German Jews after 1815, and Jews formed 6.5% of the total population. As late as 1846, 80% of Posen Jews were without citizenship, p. 172. The courts in Posen would not deal with criminal cases after 1815 until the Jewish oath was removed, p. 173, n. 9, citing Strauss, Herbert, "Pre-Emancipation Prussian Policies towards the Jews 1815-1847," LBIYB, Vol. 11, 1966, pp. 123-124, q. v., under Emancipation and Emigration, supra.

The Jews were attacked in 1848, p. 226; and Jewish migration from Posen increased after the revolution, p. 233. In 1848 the Jews identified with the Germans against the Poles in Lissa, and Krotoschin Jewish merchant, L. Benas [probably, "Lewin Benass," merchant and deliveryman, naturalized in Krotoschin on 22 September 1834, in Luft, Edward, The Naturalized Jews..., p. 7] almost singlehandedly restored the local government in the face of Polish insurrection in Krotoschin, p. 237. In Lissa Jews tore down the Polish colors, p. 237. The Jewish population of the combined Regierungsbezirke of Posen and Bromberg: 1849: 76,757; 1871: 61,437; 1900: 35,327. A boycott by Poles of the Jewish merchants failed, and the H-T-K Society admitted Jews as needed to Germanize Posen, p. 238. Polish-Jewish antagonism is discussed, pp. 239-240.

The Poznań Jewish community was very traditional in the early nineteenth century, p. 137. In Lissa in 1797 only two of seven community elders could write German; in 1833 all 602 voting community members could write German. A similar situation existed in Poznań, p. 186n., citing Lewin, Louis, Geschichte der Juden in Lissa, q. v. under Lissa. Schools had to be established starting in 1824 and voluntary military service existed from 1797, p. 188. Details of Poznań Jewish political situation and relations to German given, indicating that the right to hold political office first occurred in 1833 and not in 1847. The writer confuses the right to hold office as a religious community councillor with that of holding local city political office, pp. 188-189. In 1847 the Upper Chamber of 70 princes, counts, nobles, and dignitaries as well as the gentry, representatives of the cities, and representatives of the rural communities opposed equalization of treatment of Posen Jews while the Lower Chamber voted for such equalization; of the 80,000 Jews in Posen Province in 1847, 15,000 were naturalized, p. 214. While Bismarck favored greater liberalization, he did not go so far as the Lower Chamber. He declared that most Jews were honorable and appeared to favor equalization and free settlement of Posen Jews in the other provinces. He thought that the Jews would remain in Posen. He was wrong. Within 50 years of being granted freedom of movement the Jewish population in Posen declined from 80,000 to 26,000, p. 216.

The following articles, all dealing with Jüdische Familien-Forchung, appeared in SAA, Issue 20, Winter 2002:

From the Editors, "Jüdische Familienforchung," pp. 31-33, including a reprint of Reissner, Hanns G., "Gesellschaft für Jüdische Familienforschung," originally appearing in Toledot: The Journal of Jewish Genealogy, Summer 1977, pp. 7-9. The article gives a list of where one can buy a microfiche containing all issues and of major libraries holding copies of the journal. Note that for most search engines, the spelling is Jüdische Familien-Forchung.

Adler, Yvonne, translator, "Jüdische Familienforschung: Membership Lists," pp. 34-39. Taken from Issue 2, May, 1925, pp. 43-46 and Issue 8, December 1926, pp. 190-199. The article translate the information into English. Meseritz: Rathe, Max: 1926; and Schneidemühl: Nobel, Dr., I., Rabbi: 1925, both p. 38. Many of the names listed under "Berlin" and some other locations, such as Breslau, were persons who were born in Posen and often resided there until the end of World War I but are not identified as such. This article is noted in AIRJG, Vol. 18, No. 1, Spring 2002, p. 55.

Editors, "Jüdische Familienforschung: Name Indices," pp. 39-45. List of names of persons searched for by readers of the magazine. Although many names could be of Posen origin, only the following are specifically so identified: Falk, Josua, b. 1805 Lissa, p. 40; Fraenkel, son of Rabbi Mose F. in Koschmin, p. 41; Goldschmidt, M. Abraham in Krotoschin, p. 41; Jizchok ben Abraham, d. 1685 in Posen, p. 42; Landsberg, Moses, Rabbi in Posen, p. 42; Lewy, Heymann, from Birnbaum, p. 42; Margolit in Zduny, p. 42; Moll in Lissa, p. 43; Posener in Zirke, p. 43; Reisner in Lissa, p. 43; Schiff, Wolf, from Wollstein, p. 44; Sternberg in Pleschen, p. 44; Szamatolski in Pinne, p. 44; and Uri, Wilhelm, in Posen, p. 44. However, such names as Bab; Eger; Kalisch, Arje Loeb, d. 1709; Mielziner; Monasch; Pinezower; and Tuerk are examples of names with likely Posen origins. See next entry for alternative pagination to JFF entries.

"Jüdische Familienforschung: Name Indices," pp. 39-45, with illustration of the first page of the last issue (Issue 50 in Year 14, 1938) of JFF, p. 45. Includes many surnames of Posen Jews as listed in the "Suchblätter," "Fragen," and "Antworten" in the indices of Jüdische Familienforschung. The entries in the second numbering of the JFF issues, except as otherwise indicated, include Basch of Rackwitz, p. 814; Eger, wife of Abraham E., p. 958; Eger, pp. 208, 232, and 262; Falk, Josua, —, ed., Posener Heimatblätter: Organ des Verbandes Posener Heimatvereine, Berlin: Ernst Sigfried Mittler. Name changed to: Blätter des Verbandes Jüdischer Heimatvereine in May 1935 to satisfy the Nazi law requiring "Jewish" publications to make that fact clear in the title. Many announcements [births, marriages, wedding anniversaries, deaths, notices of departure from Germany], obituaries, and advertising with respect to Berlin Jews from Posen Province. Only the most important articles are indexed here. This publication is the single most important source for information on Berlin Jews from Posen Province for 1926 to 1938. In later volumes, the index appeared in the first number of the following year.

Benjamin and Rachel Fisher, both born in Kempen, were in San Francisco by 1847 and later returned to Kempen, p. 6. For Fischer, see Luft, Naturalized Jews ..., pp. 23-24.

Reverend Dr. Elkan Cohn, pp. 84-85, including photograph, p. 84, born Kosten 22 February 1820, pp. 84-85. Student of Isaac Eger, son of Akiba Eger, Cohn and was in Berlin in 1850. He went to Albany, NY as rabbi in 1854 and died in San Francisco in 1889, p. 85. For Cohn, see Luft, Naturalized Jews ..., pp. 15-18.

Julius Jacobs, pp. 114-115, including photograph, p. 114, immigrated to the USA in 1853; second son of 7 children, born Samotschin 21 December 1840, p. 114. His father was the village schoolmaster [presumably of the Jewish school in Samotschin]. He married Sarah Adler on 18 June 1869. They had 3 children: Lester, who died; Mrs. Florence Hoffman; and Alfred. Julius died in San Francisco on 22 June 1907 while in office as Assistant United States Treasurer in charge of the Sub-Treasury in San Francisco, p. 115. His father was not the teacher in the Jewish school in 1834.

Oscar Meyer, p. 128, including photograph. He was born in Fordon 1824 and was in the United States before 1851. He married Bertha Michelson in New York City in 1854. He died in San Francisco 30 September 1894, age 70, leaving a widow and 9 surviving children. See Luft, Naturalized Jews ..., "Jacob Meyer," p. 64.

Samuel Ostroski, pp. 131-132, including photograph, p. 131. He was born in Kempen 1836 and lived in Oroville, CA, p. 131, dying in San Francisco 1897. He had been a grocer, married to Amelia Harris of San Francisco in 1875, p. 132. See Luft, Naturalized Jews ..., David Ostrowski, p. 69.

Julius Platschek, pp 133-134, including photograph, p. 134. He was born in Schwersenz, "West Prussia" [sic], 18 October 1833 and arrived in New York City in 1850, remaining there for 3 years, p. 133. In 1859 he married Lena Rich, a native of Schwersenz, and fathered two children, including M. J. Platschek, attorney, who was alive in San Francisco in June 1916. Julius died, probably in San Francisco on 3 November 1907, p. 134. See Placzek in Schwersenz, Luft, Naturalized Jews ..., p. 72, and Reich in Schwersenz, p. 74.

Joseph Weissbein, pp. 160-161, including photograph, p. 161. He died on 15 June 1915, having been born in Germany on 25 August 1854 and graduated from the Gymnasium in Hohensalza, c. 1871. [The high school records do not support this contention although a Salo Weißbein, born in Bromberg, the son of a Hohensalza merchant, did graduate from there in 1865.] Joseph then left for California. His brother was Jacob Weissbein, p. 241 [and discussed infra, this entry]. Joseph married Harriet B. Wolfe on 2 August 1891, fathering two daughters, Mrs. Samuel Kahn of Stockton and Beatrice H. Weissbein, p. 161. See Luft, Naturalized Jews ..., p. 93.

Israel Julius Aschheim, pp. 165-166, including photograph, p. 165. He was born in Margonin, the son of Julius and Dina Aschheim. He was in California by 1868 and joined his brothers in Plumas County, CA, going to school there, p. 165. He married Elizabeth Fleischman in 1900. She died in 1905, and he married again to Edith Salomon in 1909, p. 166. See Luft, Naturalized Jews ..., p. 3, listing Julius.

Isidor Cohen, p. 175, including photograph. Born Schwazen [Schwersenz ?], Posen, 1843. To United States in 1860. Cohen is a western German spelling, not native to Posen.

Specific Locations

Salomon Hartman, pp. 189-190, including photograph, p. 190. He married in Kobylagora (now Heideberg), near Kempen, in January 1841. He was the son of Israel Joseph and Scheindel Jenny Hartman. In 1870 in Kobylagora he married Fanny Pauline Krotoszyner of Ostrowo, and fathered children: Mrs. Jenny Krotoszyner, Jacob C. Hartman, Dr. George W. Hartman, Henrietta May Hartman, and Edmund Isidor Hartman. He arrived in New York City in 1860, leaving for San Francisco in 1863, p. 189. He had a brother Morris in San Francisco, who died in 1896. Salomon and his wife were alive in June 1916, p. 190. See Krotoschiner of Ostrowo, Luft, Naturalized Jews..., p. 48.

Discussion of the Naturalization Decree of 1833 and its implications, pp. 43-44. In 1843 almost 2/5 of Jews in Posen lacked civil rights, p. 48. Prior to 1847, it was difficult for Jews to move from Posen to another part of Prussia; those other parts had in effect the Emancipation Edict of 1812, which did not apply to Posen as it was not in Prussia in 1812, p. 50. In 1816-1817, there were 51,960 Jews in Posen or 6.4% of the total population; in 1848 the number was 76,910 or 5.7% of total population, p. 54.

For Posen and the rest of Prussia, 13,000 to 14,000 Jews emigrated prior to 1848, pp. 59 and 296. The Jews had long been active in crafts in Posen, unlike in some other parts of Germany; in 1800 three of 11 physicians in Posen were Jewish; Kempen had only Jewish physicians in 1800, p. 79. Posen Jews were culturally part of Polish Jewry until the late 18th century, p. 92. A fragment of the Julius [here called Julian] Knorr painting of 1838 [called "Der Marktplatz in Posen"] showing Akiba Eger and his "two escorts;" cheders were found in Posen well into the 19th century and taught in Yiddish, p. 95. Akiba Eger, born in Hungary in 1761, died in Posen 1837, rabbi of Posen, pp. 97-98. In Posen, younger, better-educated teachers forced older, less capable colleagues to seek employment in the smallest villages where pay was low and respect for teachers was lacking, p. 115. One instructor in Posen had to pass a 3-day oral and written examination in 1828 to obtain a certificate to become an elementary school teacher, pp. 115-116 and p. 357, n. 6, citing Yaffee, Mordechai, "Moritz Jaffe: Das Lebensbild eines jüdischen Lehrers in der Provinz Posen in der ersten Hälfte des 19. Jahrhunderts," BLBI, Vol. 31, 1965, p. 211, q. v. under Lissa, this chapter. In Posen, but not elsewhere in Prussia, starting in 1833 the study of the Jewish religion was required of Jews in both Jewish and secular schools, p. 117. Salomon Plessner, teacher of religion, p. 127. Samuel Holdheim, 1806-1860, and his views, pp. 141-144. In Posen there was a regulation limiting the number of Jewish city council members to one-quarter or one-third of all representatives, pp. 263-264. After 1850 the town mayor of Sarne was Jewish and in some parts of Posen the paid financial officer was Jewish. In Posen city, however, the first Jewish members of the city council were not elected until 1846. About 150-160 Jews were active members of the city governments in Posen Province before 1848, p. 264. Moritz Jutrosinski, a Jewish medical student, p. 272. In 1859/1860 the Prussian Minister of the Interior confirmed a paid Jewish city council member in Posen, p. 294. The absolute number of Jews in Posen Province decreased in the 1860s, p. 295. Isaak Bernstein, grain dealer from Posen Province, went to the USA secretly in 1852, after losing his money. He was from a poor Jewish family and left his second wife and his children by her with her parents. He left his oldest child with his parents. He sailed in mid-September 1852 in steerage from Hamburg for New York City for a cost of 28 Thaler [cited in Richarz, Monika, Der Eintritt der Juden in die akademischen Berufe, Tübingen, 1974, pp. 472-473 and p. 363, n. 15], q. v. under Samotschin [He was from Samotschin]. He returned eight years later, p. 297. [Possibly Itzig Lewin Bernstein of Dreydorff, near Lobsenz, merchant. See Luft, Naturalized Jews ..., p. 9.] Freedom of migration led initially to the increase in the establishment of rural communities, p. 298. Most of the Jews who moved to Berlin came from Posen, sometimes after a stopover in Breslau; the Jewish population in Posen city in 1871 was 7,000 and declining. Kempen went from a Jewish population of 3,000 in 1852 to 2,500 in 1871; Lissa from 3,000 to 1,900 during the same period; Krotoschin from 2,350 to 1,450; and Inowroclaw from 2,100 to 1,600. About 50,000 Jews left Posen Province between 1834 and 1871, about 50% going overseas and 50% to Berlin. From 1856 to 1871, 26,500 Jews left Posen Province or 63.2% of all migration from the Province, p. 299. Posen was known for its poor Jews prior to 1848, p. 308. During the first two decades of its existence starting in 1854, most Jewish Theological Seminary of Breslau students were traditional, often coming from Posen, p. 332. E184.J5M667 1996. Some names from Posen Province, arranged alphabetically, pp. 1-109, and chronologically, pp. 110-182. Some "corrected" entries are actually from Posen. A very useful source book for Hamburg immigration data for the period, but limited to the "Indirect Lists," meaning those ships which stopped at an intermediate port in Europe after leaving Hamburg and before docking in the United States. It appears that many persons claimed to be from towns in Posen when they were actually from the Kingdom of Poland (Russian Administration). Itzig Hamburger, born Schmiegel, 1811, pp. 289-301, with notes, p. 301. His father was a wholesaler as was he, p. 289. The family was prominent in Schmiegel. They left Schmiegel for Breslau after their parents died, p. 290. His father had a haberdashery and wholesale ready-made wear business, p. 291. Itzig married at age 17 and in January 1830 had his own business, p. 292. Itzig had a brother, Salomon, in Posen in 1860. Itzig's nephew, who was married, was director of the Schmiegel firm, Marcus Landsberg, until his death in 1893, p. 293. Itzig's eldest brother, Baruch, had a son, Josef Hamburger. Another brother was Meyer. They stayed in Schmiegel until 1857 when they went to Breslau. Marcus Landsberg married Rosalie Hoppenheim, the daughter of the deceased eldest sister of the writer's [Itzig's son's] mother, p. 298. Another brother was Zacharias, p. 299. Itzig had two other sons, Heinrich and Albert, p. 299.

Salomon Cohn, born Kempen, 1817, pp. 356-359, including notes, p. 359. Covers 1817 to end of September 1865. Printed privately, third edition, Pest, 1868, 48 pp. He was from an orthodox family; his stepfather, a drunken flour dealer, threw him out at age 13. He became a private tutor in Posen Province. In Coesfeld, Westphalia, after 1836 he was declared an illegal Posen protected Jew and emigrated to Hungary, p. 356.

"Moritz Jutrosinski," pp. 417-419 , no notes. He was born in Sandberg 1825 and died in Berlin 1909. Dr. Moritz Jutrosinski, son of a tailor, after years as a private tutor, became an assistant teacher in Posen in 1862. His father Michal Jutrosinski was a piece-work tailor with eight children. Louis Jutrosinski, Moritz' brother was born 30 December 1830, and was a tailor like his grandfather and father, working in Vienna and Paris. Moritz, the eldest son of Michal, was the first in the family to study, first in Sandberg at the Jewish school, and later with the monks, p;. 417. He moved to Breslau in 1847 but was again in Posen from 1862 as an assistant teacher, p. 418. On 15 November 1864 he married Ernestine Hamburger of Kosten, who was born on 14 April 1840, daughter of the merchant Nathan Hamburger, whose family came from "Bujanowo" [sic, ? Bojanowo] since the middle of the 18th century. Their first child, Richard, was born on 24 August 1865 and a daughter, Margarethe, was born in 1868. Two other children, Ludwig and Hans, died young. Moritz became the first director of the Jewish orphanage in Berlin, moving with his family to Berlin on 2 April 1872, p. 419.

Based upon Jutrosinski, Richard, Die Familie Jutrosinski, Berlin, 1928, 7 pp. At Leo Baeck Institute, ME 341, MF 114(2): Michal Jutrosinski, a tailor in Sandberg, had three sons, Moritz, his eldest, Siegfried, and Louis (Lippmann). Moritz [called Breslauer] went to the Gymnasium in Lissa and to the University in Breslau. Michal's son Louis, born 30 December 1830, was a tailor, like his father and grandfather, p. 417. Moritz married Ernestine Hamburger, born 14 April 1840, from Kosten on 15 November 1864. She was the daughter of merchant Nathan Hamburger [See Luft, Naturalized Jews..., p. 33]. In the mid-eighteenth century, the Hamburger family had lived in Bojanowo. The first child of the marriage was Richard, born 24 August 1865; the second child was Margarethe, born in 1868; sons Ludwig and Hans had died young. From 2 April 1872 until his death in 1906 Moritz Jutrosinski directed a Berlin orphanage founded by the Jewish textile industrialist, Moritz Reichenheim, aided by his brother the parliamentarian, Leonor Reichenheim, pp. 417 and 419. Lippmann died in Jarotschin, living there between 1805 and 1813, marrying Haje of Jarotschin. He was a dealer and tailor, dying in 1831. Breslauer married in Sandberg and died there on 27 November 1818. Lippmann married twice, 5 + 2 children. From his first marriage, daughter Mirel [or Emilie] married merchant Leiser Czlowiek in Pleschen. Son Michel settled in Sandberg, son Hirsch [Hermann] was a tailor in Gostyn, daughter Rahel married Benjamin Friedmann, and third daughter was his second wife. From the second marriage, Sarah married capmaker Heymann Waldhorn in Jarotschin and daughter Freide died unmarried, p. 1 of the original manuscript. Many others in Jutrosinski family and their spouses listed, including immigrants to the United States.

Hermann Makower, born Santomysl, 1830, died Berlin, 1897, pp. 442-451, with notes, p. 451. Berlin barrister (K. C.). His father was from Mackow in Russia, and Hermann wandered westward, becoming a private tutor. After marriage, Hermann lived with his father-in-law, a legal consultant, in Santomysl. He was a liberal (commonly understood at the time to be a radical), p. 442. mention of Eduard Lasker, 1829-1884, born Jutroschin, [and died New York City], parliamentarian and lawyer, p. 446 and p. 451, n. 2.

Isaak Bernstein, born Schildberg 1824, died Berlin 1893, pp. 471-474, with note, p. 474. He was from a poor, orthodox family. By marriage he acquired a tobacco and grain business in Miloslaw but emigrated to the United States in 1852, beginning as a peddler in upstate New York. He gained some capital in the South and opened a china business in New Bedford, MA. In 1858 he went back to Germany to take a bride to the United States and returned in 1859 due to illness. His brother Salomon, and friend Alexander Mendelsohn lived in Miloslaw, and Isaak became engaged to Mendelsohn's sister-in-law, the niece of Abraham Leichtentritt, née Radziewska. His nephew M. Radziewski and cousin Gustav Leichtentritt were revolutionaries in the 1848 uprising. Isaak's first wife died in 1848 from cholera, and he moved to Gnesen, p. 472. His second wife had two children. After 44 days at sea from Hamburg, the family landed in New York City. He found his brother in New York City was very poor. Morris Anhalt from Ostrowo was in Elmira, NY, p. 473. By April 1854, Isaak's mother had died. He had a sister, Goldchen. In 1857 his sister married their cousin, K. L. Stone of San Francisco, CA. Isaak had two brothers, Salomon and Samuel, p. 474.

The school was founded in the early 19th century and operated for about 100 years. It called itself a yeshiva but was actually a school for training thieves, such as Daniel Simon, David Pinkus, Abraham Danciger (who became famous for his daring assault on Count Kalckreuth), Selig Levi, and Mozes Bernhardt, son of Nathan, known as Betsche Steel, and nicknamed Long Jokuf. This last-named thief was famous for attacks on banks in Bärwald and Neustadt. When threatened with arrest in Meseritz, he obtained a passport and vanished. The school had a secret tunnel to a sawmill in case the police raided the school. The thieves even manufactured devices for picking locks and made other tools for burglary which they even exported to South America. The following Jewish citizens were listed, showing the number in the book, the last and first name, the date of citizenship, and sometimes profession, the age, date of birth and/or place of birth. Those whose birthplace is not listed were from Birnbaum. References to "Luft" are to Luft, Naturalized Jews..., ©1987. There are discrepancies as to the date of naturalization in many cases, with the date here being earlier than the date indicated in Luft; sometimes the profession also differs and there are slight name differences. All naturalizations in Birnbaum under the Decree of the 1st of June 1833 occurred on 11 July 1834; those listed here occurred under the city law decree., which became applicable to Jews as a result of the Naturalization Decree of 1 June 1833.
